FO&A,
Per DXing.Com => http://www.dxing.com/rx/sw8.htm

*  Units produced after 03/31/95 (S/N >= 5C) feature a preamp circuit for the telescopic whip antenna.
*  Units produced after 01/01/96 (S/N >= 6A) include coverage down to 100 kHz (long wave) and have Selectable Sideband Syncro.
This SW8's Serial Number is: 4B12950064
So it would be one of the original early production units without the three above "Improvements".

PNG had a good countdown at 1400, with bell chimes and then Auld Lang Syne.

December 22 2004

A new web site (www.radioheritage.net ) has been launched to celebrate the story of radio broadcasting in the Pacific region, and to provide a home for a wide variety of radio heritage activities, exhibitions, archiving, research and advocacy projects covering New Zealand, Australia, the Pacific Islands and reaching as far as countries around the Pacific Rim.

'Radio has a long history in the Pacific' says Radio Heritage Foundation chairman David Ricquish.

'In fact, it's even claimed by some biographers that "Rutherford began what Marconi completed" in which case, New Zealand is the real home of radio broadcasting in the modern age'

Whether New Zealand's Lord Rutherford was indeed the true father of radio instead of Marconi is one of the hundreds of fascinating topics the Radio Heritage Foundation plans to investigate in the near future.

Currently, www.radioheritage.net contains information about various projects which the Foundation has underway, highlights radio heritage issues, and a selection of articles from its on-line archives project.

'We have hundreds of articles and thousands of images already available from our collections' says David Ricquish, and we'll be bringing these on-line as fast as resources allow. Our definition of "heritage" is anything up to a nano-second ago, so contemporary radio issues are as important to us as those of the 1920's or any other era' he adds.

'Radio has touched every aspect of our lives for almost a century now' says David Ricquish. "It has a social history, cultural, artistic, technological, heritage, genealogy and entertainment context' he says, 'and this web site, and indeed, the whole project, helps us understand just what the impact of radio on our lives continues to be in the new digital era.'

The Radio Heritage Foundation is a non-profit charity based in Wellington, New Zealand. Board members include prominent broadcasters from New Zealand, Australia and Europe and a growing number of contributors and volunteers loc ated across the Pacific from the USA, Canada and Japan, to Australia and New Zealand.

Considering the news we get from other countries about how everything we do is considered wrong somehow...

Exactly why should anyone in the US give a flying fuck what happens outside the US?

We are going to catch hell for doing it, no matter what.

The observatory has a 16" classical cassegrain with optics by Perkin Elmer and a 4" Unitron.

I have a bad back so none of my personally owned stuff is large.

I have a C8 on a german eq mount I built with a friend that's used infrequently. I also have a Brandon 80mm apo that's very portable, and a Zoomar Reflectar 1000mm f8 camera lens that was converted to a telescope.

When I'm not at the observatory, the scope I'm most likely to use is a TMB 175 apo refractor on an ap 900gto mount that's owned by a close friend. It's an incredible scope - but I wouldn't want to have to heft it on a regular basis. He's got a TMB 229 on order.

I'll be getting a TMB in the general range of a 115 when I identify a mount that's sturdy enough for astro photography but portable enough to take on a plane. (It doesn't get much better than hanging out by the pool in Naples on a clear night with a nice refractor and my 7030+)

The camera lenses I'm most likely to use for astro photography are a Questar 700, a Nikon 80-200 f2.8 and a Kilfitt 600mm f5.6. I've been fortunate enough to acquire most of the Alpa long focus lenses, but since getting the D70 I'm just not using film very often.

I've also got a 5" F8 apo triplet lens in cell I picked up at Stellafane, but I'm gonna have to get it checked out before I build a proper tube for it.

When I put it in a quick and dirty tube for preliminary testing, I didn't see color, but images were soft when I used anything shorter than a 40mm eyepiece. It could be my tube was a little too quick and dirty - or it could be the seller is a graduate of the radio-mart ethics institute.  A 5" f8  would be great for weekend getaways.  I've got a 4" focuser for it, and if it's good, I'll pick up a feathertouch too.

Regards,

Mark

Yep and all it does is wear me down. I'm sick and tired of hearing how f--ked up we are.

I picked one up a couple years ago when it was on sale. I used it by the bedside for a few weeks and then returned it. It just didn't seem like it was very sensitive.

I should just pick up another R8 and run some coax into the bedroom.

There may be a lesson to be learned here. It could happen here (wherever here is to any reader of this NG) and we should do what we can while we can to "be prepared" as the Boy Scouts would say.

I realize it wouldn't do much good to have had a year's supply of stored food and water, along with medical supplies, etc., etc., etc., if they were near the water's edge when a Tsunami / Tidal Wave hit.  However, not all of us live on the brink of a 7000 mile pond or at sea level. Even then and there some buried supplies might have survived.  Think about it!

There WILL be an emergency of some kind in the lives of most of us; but someone has said, "There is no emergency to him who is prepared!"  We can lessen the number of "emergencies" that come our way be preparing for as many eventualities as possible.

The job obviously killed him. Twenty four hours a day for decades..A lesser man would have snapped. I wonder what kind of coffee kept him going.

A monument to his vocal chords and determination should be erected NOW.

He must have done his newscasting in between the minute announcements, cleverly disguising his breaks every sixty seconds as 'breathing intervals'.

There are rumours his identical twin has already taken over, without missing a beat.

Wow! Your really into it. I would love to have a TMB 175.  Your fortunate to have such great equipment at your disposal. I'm just getting started and I love my C8. I'm going to start building my observatory next summer. It'll have an nice warming room attached and I want to put a Sirius dome on the observatory area. I'm lucky to live in a area with very dark skies so it's quite rewarding.

Congrats on your new radio! After it arrives, please share with us some of your thoughts and likes/dislikes about the radio. I hope it improves radio reception at your office. By the way, just as a reminder, as I'm sure you're already aware of this, but...you do know that when receiving MW signals (AM BCB), you need to swivel the radio one way or another to align the internal loopstick with the broadcasting station(?) I only mention this because you had said you used a boombox in your office, and I just didn't know if you were able to swivel the boombox (which is normally a large radio in an office enviroment) for improved reception. It's one of the advantages of using a smaller travel radio like a 7600GR or YB400 -- to swivel and/or position as needed. Anyways...let us know how it goes, and have fun!

Brother Stair's prophesies only get better with each retelling. Who can forget the Reagan Prophesy? Brother Stair's outstanding Planet X Prophesy aged like fine vintage wine, particularly after May, 2003.

The Millitsunami Prophesy was already a re-run. Brother Stair gave last Monday's date.

Run?  Just where should New Yorkers and Bostonians run to?  Brother Stair's millitsunami could wipe out EVERYTHING from Chicago back to the East Coast, a distance of hundreds of miles.

Although, given Brother Stair's prophetic accuracy, any lazy perambulation will be more than sufficient.

There is NO EXCUSE for maintaining even a modicum of control during a major Brother Stair Prophesy.

Brother Stair started his prophesy by reading from some other prophet's prophetic dream, presumably dreamed up in the 1930s. In that dream, the dreamer was in the Los Angeles of the future. There were busses and strangely shaped cars on the street. People were walking a weird walk, which the dreamer couldn't master. Men had long hair and ear rings. The Los Angeles of the future was set in 1969! Brother Stair sounded as if he hadn't had time to prepare and was reading his material cold. The prediction, or perhaps postdiction, ended with a severe earthquake.

Amazingly, the LA quake pre or postdiction was just the warm-up for the magnificent Millitsunami Prophesy.

Brother Stair then read some material about a potential Atlantic earthquake. He was stumbling over the size of the wave, and seemingly decided that fifty millimeter waves were far more frightening than fifty meter waves.

Brother Stair got to the part about the damage done to the cities. "Ahhh, the cities!" The Prophet of God started ad-libbing. "New York, Chicago, Boston...."

Between the so-called 1930s 1969 LA quake postdiction and the prediction that Chicago would be wiped out by fifty millimeter waves in the Atlantic -- well, I just lost it. It took about fifteen minutes for normal breathing to resume.

I really doubt such weirdness does any harm to Brother Stair's cause. His donors don't need to know the difference between a meter and a millimeter or even that Chicago is an inland city.

The rigor mortis point is just a continuance of Al's "hands raised to Jesus" argument, separated only by time.

However, the idea that anyone would agree with Al, even adding a logical extension, is even farther up the novelty scale than Al's original thesis.

Well done, sir!

The nun's are painting the convent, and not wanting to get their attire stained with paint and figuring it's a convent anyway they stripped off their garments and painted away in the nude.  Upon hearing a knock on the door one of the nuns asks "Who's there" and hears the reply "Blind man".  So fearing nothing the nuns remain naked and open the door; the man walks in and says "Nice tits, where do you want me to hang the blinds?"

What can I say,  your comment on the convent sparked a synapse ......

I can't go anywhere today! Those old Three Stooges movies are running back to back on tb now.(tb,Dennis the Menance,tb) A million years ago when I went to school,sometimes the school would run a Three Stooges or Little Rascals movie and I would beg my mom for a dime so I could see the movie.I used to sit in the balcony with the other boys and we would throw stuff down on the girls down there.

By Jim Nash
Dec. 28, 2004

A small startup in Silicon Valley has an anti-intrusion tool that sells for $69 a gallon--you supply the brush.

Force Field Wireless makes three products that it says can dramatically reduce the leakage of wireless signals from a room or building. The company's sales manager, Harold Wray, co-developed DefendAir Radio Shield latex paint, which contains copper filings and an aluminum compound. When spread evenly on a wall, the paint reflects signals in frequencies from 100 MHz to 5 GHz. Paint four walls, a floor, and a ceiling, and you effectively have a Faraday cage, which is a specially constructed metal room that blocks all radio signals in or out, suitable for a CIA director or a determined shut-in.

"It was my concept along with my colleague, Diane Lopez," says Wray, a former network engineer with Networks Associates. "We knew of people inundated with interference on their wireless systems. In fact, Diane, in her apartment, could find eight wireless networks around her. She needed to shield herself."

Pete Lindstrom, research director at Spire Security, says the idea is intriguing. It's for people who have a "mid- to high level of comfort with wireless," Lindstrom says. "The really security conscious are going to ban wireless altogether."

DefendAir is nontoxic, contains no lead, and meets all U.S. Environmental Protection Agency standards, Wray says. Besides the paint, Force Field sells 32 ounces of a copper/aluminum powder that homeowners can add to their own paint for $34. The company also makes a window film that cuts down on signal leakage: A 30-inch-by-25-foot roll is priced at $45.

"This wouldn't be the first thing I'd do to secure a network," says Spire Security's Lindstrom. "But in a crowded environment, in an office complex, it might be a thing to do." It's better to implement a solid authentication/encryption system, he says.

Force Field's Wray says sales are going well. A paint manufacturer delivers 100 gallons once every two months or so, and the paint was sold out last quarter. Businesses make up the bulk of Force Field's customers, but Wray is pushing hard to win over consumers and looking at government sales, too.

"Businesses--particularly commercial real-estate developers--see an immediate need for it," he says.

Indeed, 71% of those responding to InformationWeek Research's Outlook report for the fourth quarter of '04 say they plan to implement network-security-management apps. Sixty percent say they plan to deploy intrusion-detection software, and 42% plan to fire up wireless IP-based apps.

"Consider [radio-frequency identification], where not only are we talking about wireless networking but the whole value of RFID is the message emanating from the tags," says Lindstrom. DefendAir would be an attractive option to protect an RFID-enabled warehouse, he says.

There are drawbacks to the paint. It doesn't just block wireless networks. In the home, it would block the one or two remaining TVs connected to rabbit ears. More important, it blocks mobile-phone signals. Wray suggests that businesses either paint only critical parts of buildings or introduce wireless callers to the smokers huddled around the front door.

Convincing consumers to take wireless security seriously has been harder. "They see it like tinfoil on your head," Wray says. "They think it's kind of paranoid."

Force Field has been trying to interest the Department of Homeland Security, but discussions are ongoing, Wray says. "Ironically, we have had foreign governments contact us--from the Middle East. Kind of scary." Wray says he won't sell to them.

He may be from Texas. I hear they changed Pi to an even '3' for ease of use. Kinda like the math equivalent of Ebonics.

Race: Any of the different varieties or populations of human beings distinguished by a) physical traits such as hair, eyes, skin color, body shape, etc.; traditionally, the three primary divisions are Caucasoid, Negroid, and Mongoloid, although many subdivisions of these are also called races b) blood types c) genetic code patterns d) all their inherited characteristics which are unique to their isolated breeding population. [Webster's New World College Dictionary 4th Ed]

Racist is not in that dictionary, but someone has said that a "racist" is anyone whom the Jews do not like.  I suppose others would add more races to that so one can make many variations on that same theme.

St. John 1:1-3 KJV, referring to Jesus Christ, tells us, "1) In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. 2) The same was in the beginning with God. 3) All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made."

The Amplified renders it this way, "IN THE beginning [before all time] was the Word (Christ), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God Himself. [Isa. 9:6.] 2  He was present originally with God. 3  All things were made and came into existence through Him; and without Him was not even one thing made that has come into being.
4  In Him was Life, and the Life was the Light of men."

Now, If everything that was made, or came into being, was by and through the Lord Jesus Christ and if the races exist, as they do, then Jesus Christ made the races!  I suppose you'd call Him a racist! ...In addition to all the other things the Talmud accuses him of being? You'll really think He is a racist when you get to know some of His sayings!

2 Samuel 3:18, (NASB95) “Now then, do it! For the Lord has spoken of David, saying, ‘By the hand of My servant David I will save My people Israel from the hand of the Philistines and from the hand of all their enemies.’”

Notice:  The LORD [Jesus Christ] promised David that He would save His people ISRAEL from the hand of the Philistines AND FROM THE HAND OF ALL THEIR ENEMIES!  Looks like Jesus Christ (The Lord, God) took sides, thus becoming, in the eyes of all but Israel, A RACIST!

Zechariah 8:7 is similar.

Notice Matthew 15:26 where Christ tells the woman wanting a miracle that it is not fit to take the Children's bread and throw it to DOGS.  Was He calling her or her people dogs?  SHAME!

Now let's take a look to see what Colossians 1 tells us about this RACIST. Colossians 1:12-17 (KJV)

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light: 13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: 14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins: 15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: 16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: 17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

Especially look at verse 14. We have redemption IN CHRIST, THROUGH HIS BLOOD [Could this be why the enemies of Israel don't want us to believe in the Bible or Jesus Christ? You know every time the stock market goes up or down someone wins and someone else looses! According to Deuteronomy 28 and 32 this is the case with Israel. IF they keep God's laws He will lift them up and put others beneath them. IF they do not keep His laws He will LIFT OTHERS UP and PUT ISRAEL DOWN! See why so many hate Israel?] . . . But I digress. Let's jump right to verses 16 and 17.

Brackets / comments are mine: 16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: [You mean this Guy whom the Jews crucified was the CREATOR of ALL THINGS? They were created FOR HIM? Not for our enjoyment, entertainment, or corruption!? ...even the INVISIBLE? ...Kings? ...Kingdoms? ...Presidencies? ...The United Nations? ...Tsunamis? ...Earthquakes? ...The Ring of Fire? ...All of them were created BY HIM AND FOR HIM! WOW! WOW! ... WOW! ]

Verse 17, "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist." [ ...he is BEFORE ALL THINGS, eternal, non-created, self-existent - before ALL things! wow! and BY HIM ALL THINGS CONSIST! Are you serious? He not only MADE all things He MAINTAINS, SUPPORTS, KEEPS UP, CONTINUES, HOLDS TOGETHER ALL THINGS! wow! Did you ever consider what would happen if He just decided to let go and let man run things for himself? He may be doing just that. Like a parent who allows a child a bit more freedom one item at the time just to see if they are then able to handle that situation. God, Jesus Christ, whom many love to hate, just may have allowed us to learn about magnetism, matter, anti-matter, gravity, anti-gravity, low frequency sound waves, scalar energy, controlling people, controlling things, just to see if we'd do as we should with such information.

I thought about posting concerning the Rainbow and the Ring of Fire, but won't say much for now. God gave the rainbow as a sign in the heavens that He'd never destroy the world by flood again. He will destroy, purge, renovate, renew the earth at some future time BY FIRE. Keep a check on the earthquakes and volcanoes. He just may be getting ready to show us a few things. Oh, yes, many will call it "natural" disasters, but I wonder. Did you ever notice if anything good ever happened some man tries to take credit for it, but if anything bad happens they call it an "act of God" ? Maybe God has decided to act! ...as if He only acts when something bad happens!

Yep! God is a racist! He brought all kinds of plagues on Egypt and none of those plagues touched the little area called Goshen where the children of Israel lived! He drowned all the kings horses and all the kings men, but allowed the children of Israel safe passage. He casts some into hell and will give some eternal bliss. He killed the kings men who cast the three Hebrew children into the fiery furnace but allowed them to walk about in a furnace heated seven times hotter than ever before. They came out unbound and without even the SMELL OF SMOKE on their clothing! He allowed Daniel to rest peacefully in the lions den - totally unharmed -- but had the lions break the bones of those conspirators who had Daniel thrown into that same pit with the same lions -- before their bodies could hit the floor!

Yep! God is really a racist God! Those that are his, purchased by the blood of His dear Son, are going to be protected and provided for while others will perish in ways that even the minds of the vilest of men can not imagine, today! This is not to say that Christians will not see trials and tribulations! Some will give their lives for Christ. Many already have. But, in the end, it will far surpass Allah's "promise" of seventy virgins! Our God doesn't lie! His Word will come to pass. Get ready!

Al

This is one of the things we discuss a lot over on misc.survivalism (in among the name calling, flame wars, OT posts, and rampant egos.
It reminds me so much of this place...).  What is a danger, and how do you prepare for it?  We consider pandemics, earthquakes, blizzard, forest fire, the Yellowstone supervolcano and the massive chunks of the Canary Islands (in the Atlantic) and the Hawaiian Islands (in the Pacific) that are at risk of breaking loose and sending walls of water even HIGHER than the Sumartarn quake at their respective shores...

Of course, one of the first steps in being prepared for disaster is being informed.  And having a good radio - especially a shortwave one so you can hear news that the American media doesn't report - is at the top of the list for that...

Metro Family Blames Death on War Related Illness
December 29, 2004

The family of a metro soldier fears he died from a war-related illness.
They shared their story exclusively with NBC Action News.
35-year-old Army Sergeant Clay Garton spent 16-months in Iraq. His family says ammunition used by soldiers poisoned him. They claim he was exposed to depleted uranium dust during a rescue mission in Fallujah in May.
The government contends the health risks are low.
Clay�s dad Duane Garton says, "Thirty-five years I had the boy. He went through 16 months of hell, he come back, and they didn't do nothing for him. That's what I don't understand, why they couldn't do something for him. They just let him lay there and keep going down and down."
A memorial fund has been set up to benefit Clay Garton's three children.
To donate, call the Raytown branch of the Bank of America at (816) 979-6292.

Hmm.. I've thought about that, but I think that the kids wouldn't go for having a brick hanging off of a pulley on the end of their wooden playset, and my wife would freak if I did that at the other end, where our screened in porch is.

I may just keep it with the poly rope in pretty much an as-is configuration for a while, and see how it goes.

You might want to consider buying a TimeWave ANC-4 unit (see URL:
http://www.timewave.com/)

These are great for electrical intference, computer interference and many many types.   I too at times run indoor ants for receiving and the ANC units will kill most interference.

I also on the Ham Bands use a Yaesu FT-847 for HF and at times my 52"
RCA bigscreen will cause a few s-units of noise, again the ANC-4 will take 100% of it out.

Does anyone know thru actual listening what shortwave station(s) is using the frequency of 11955 kHz besides Deutsche Welle?  I have a current issue of the WRTH and know what stations are listed as saying that they are going to use that frequency.

This story is posted on Slashdot today:

 "A ham radio operator in New London, North Carolina correctly copied an 80 meter CW beacon in Wappingers Falls, New York, a distance of 546.8 miles.
The kicker is, the beacon station, an Elecraft K1, was putting out 40.6 uW (40.6 millionths of a Watt) -- which works out to 13,467,980 miles per watt!"

I've done far better than that mileage wise with some HIFER beacons.

Damned earthlink - no html posts.
Anyway, thanks for the info GeorgeF.
Have had some decent reception today - most of the time not so good. I have been trying to hear RAI on 11.800 and there used to be some brazilians 11.9xx - have you run across any such ?
Thanks for the reply.

I heard them today from Seattle area 11.990 23:24 german with apparent world news; I believe they were discussing the Sumatran Earthquake and relief efforts - in particular, the animals' behavior puzzles scientists (wissenschaftlers).

Hi GeorgeF,
Thanks for the info. Today has been fairly decent for reception, unlike recently. I have been hunting for RAI Rome Italy without much success, and R. Educacion Mexico City as well. Also, there used to be some brazilian stations in 25 meters around 11.9xx - have you come across any such signals where you are (where are you <s>) ? I live in the Puget Sound region (Seattle). TNX

You might want to consider buying a TimeWave ANC-4 unit (see URL:
http://www.timewave.com/)

These are great for electrical intference, computer interference and many many types.   I too at times run indoor ants for receiving and the ANC units will kill most interference.

I also on the Ham Bands use a Yaesu FT-847 for HF and at times my 52"
RCA bigscreen will cause a few s-units of noise, again the ANC-4 will take 100% of it out.

No doubt.  But the story isn't simply distance, it's that the transmitter was putting out only 40.6 millionths of a Watt and it was copied correctly by a HAM over 540 miles away.

Relax -- I'm still trying to hear Diego Garcia, and I very much appreciate your alerting me when they're broadcasting.  Sooner or later, I'm going to bag 'em.

Once again Al confirms how stupid and gullible he is. Everybody with a told urban legend. Go back to listening to Pete Peters, Al.

Thirty days later, I received my VISA statement, and the Neiman-Marcus charge was $285.00! I looked again, and I remembered I had only spent $9.95 for two salads and about $20.00 for a scarf. As I glanced at the bottom of the statement, it said, "Cookie Recipe-$250.00". That was outrageous!

I doubt if this may help (it never did for me) but FWIW, try a high pass or two on the coax input to the TV(s).

The IRA blew up a hell of a lot of people. They did it to get the occupiers out of the homeland. You said you supported that. You also said you don't identify with things English. You are proud of that. You are anti Imperialist when it comes to Ireland. Why should another nation be different than Ireland is?

How does YOUR opinion make ME a moron?

The mass graves of Ireland:

looks like an Iraqi style atrocity to me.

From 1649 to 1652, one-third of the population of Ireland was destroyed. Petty, an English historian says, �660,000 Irish people were killed.�[13] Twenty thousand Irish boys and girls also were sold into slavery to the West Indies. The Irish peasant farmers that survived were forced to pay rent to their usurpers. Once prosperous home grown industries were also destroyed because they �competed with British factories.�[14]

I don't think there's any good journalism to recognize. Everything is either op-ed or partisan advertising. Real journalism went "bye-bye" a long time ago.

Dear Michael,

You bet! Play great music, don't they?

It's been coming in loud-and-clear the past few days.

Believe it or not, I discovered it by accident while playing with my Lafayette HE-10(!) receiver (which I like to use every couple of months or so just to rekindle memories).

Of course I had my Wellbrook ALA 330S hooked up to the Lafayette (so it wasn't "really" like "old times," but what the heck ...

As soon as I identified the station (they announce "Radio Nacional do Brasilia"), I hooked the antenna back to my AOR AR7030 Plus which gave far better reception and then ran the sound through my stereo system.

I'm listening to the station as I write (no music just now; male and female announcers in Portuguese).

It's really fun and "magic," isn't it?

Best,

Joe

P.S. See my next "post" about the Wellbrook ALA 330S Active Loop Antenna.

Eric, if you look in the latest 2005 Passport you will see that the IP3 @ 5 Khz rating for the RX-340 is poor - this means that if you are DXing in MW or Tropical Bands with a strong station near your weaker target station, then the RX-340 can't resolve it, whereas various other radio's that have a much more respectable IP3 @ 5 Khz performance, like the AOR 7030, Drake R8B and Icom 75 will be able to resolve the weak signal whereas the RX-340 will not be able to do so.

Close in DXing with nearby strong signals is a feature of trying to get weak stations that are 5 Khz or nearer to other more powerful signals.
Several DXer's have indicated that Passports numbers/statistics are correct and that the RX-340 cannot render audible signals that are close by to more powerful stations.

The Icom 756 PRO III is superb in this respect as I have indicated in my comparison review

The special one-day Dutch radio station Radio 555, which operates tomorrow to raise money for the Tsunami disaster fund, has its own Website at www.radio555.nl with programming information and details of how to donate money. A live audio stream will be available. For listeners in Europe, North Africa and the US, Radio 555 will also be broadcasting on shortwave on the 6 MHz band. For the exact schedule see the station's Website. The site, which is in Dutch, also mentions that the studio will be shown live on the Nederland 2 television network from 0500-1600 UTC, and a video stream will operate via the Website.

Today, radio stations in the Netherlands observed a 1 minute silence at 1100 UTC. On TV and in most public places, a 3 minute silence was observed. Most countries in the EU also observed silence for 3 minutes, with the exception of Denmark which already held its own silent period on Sunday.

Media Network correspondent Victor Goonetilleke, 4S7VK, who is president of the Radio Society of Sri Lanka, believes that "uncomplicated shortwave" radio saved lives. "Ham radio played an important part and will continue to do so," he said in an e-mail. Until 28 December the Radio Society of Sri Lanka operated a shortwave radio link between Hambantota and the Prime Minister's disaster management office, and government offices in the stricken area. "We closed the link after the police got a communications link up in Hambantota," Victor said. "We went in because the District Secretary's office only had a satellite phone and communications were difficult." The Hambantota station was operated by Asantha Illesinghe (4S7AK), Dimuthu Wickremesinghe (4S7DZ) and Kusal Epa (4S7KE). However, there was one major problem: batteries were running out, and there were no generators to recharge them.

For those interested, there's a picture of this little radio at <http://www.geekzone.co.nz/content.asp?contentid=3856>.

It's a great concept.  An MP3 player for when you don't have wi-fi, and Internet radio for when you do, all in one box.  A lot of my "radio" listening these days is done via MP3 file timeshifting, so this would be right up my alley.

By Nick Higgins

An around-the-clock transmission capacity would not have helped Radio Australia warn people of the tsunami, the broadcasters head said yesterday.

Mr Jean-Gabriel Manguy, who divides his time between homes in Melbourne and Bethanga, said there had been no warnings to broadcast.

"It took everybody by surprise ... although I understand that in some reports people in India were aware of the tremor and expected a tsunami," Mr Manguy said from Bethanga yesterday.

Mr Manguy is anxiously waiting for contact from his older brother, Jacques, who was in southern India when the tsunami struck.

Until severe budget cuts in 1997, Radio Australia had a 24-hour shortwave broadcast to Indonesia and other parts of Asia.

The shortwave service was partly restored in 2000 and there are now daily nine-hour shortwave broadcasts throughout Indonesia.

Mr Manguy said the shortwave broadcasts were supplemented by Radio Australia being available through 155 Asian FM stations,|which broadcast in English, Thai, Indonesian, Cantonese, Japanese, Vietnamese and French.

Thirty of those stations are in Indonesia and reach an estimated seven million listeners.

Mr Manguy said the disaster had shown 24-hour transmission would have been valuable in the aftermath and during rescue and relief operations.

"Natural disasters and political violence are difficult to predict or forewarn but as soon as they happen people need to know what is going on and local coverage is often censored," he said.

Just hours after the tsunami Radio Australia journalists spoke to the Indonesian Vice-President, Mr Jusuf Kalla.

Budget cuts in the late 1990s resulted in a halving of Radio Australias staff, which now number 76.

Radio Australias annual budget is $13.5 million but in 1997 it was twice that amount.

A transmitter near Shepparton broadcasts to eastern parts of Indonesia and Pacific Ocean countries while a transmitter at Darwin broadcasts to Indian Ocean regions.

Hello All,

Many people (including myself) have questioned the performance of the Wellbrook ALA 330S Active Loop Antenna on MW.

I purchased mine last March based on good reviews in PASSPORT TO WORLD BAND RADIO 2004 (I was quite desperate at the time, due to local restrictions on outdoor SW antennas [none allowed] and EXTREME local electrical noise). Frankly, as I rarely DX on the MW band, I was concerned only with SW performance.

I have my antenna mounted in my attic atop a Radio Shack rotator.

According to the 2005 PASSPORT, the MW performance has been improved on the latest production units.

This must have included mine.

It was good enough to pick up the Ukraine on 1431 kHz last night (coming in clearly as WSNW, 5 kW, Newark, NJ, about 100 miles from my location, faded out. The fades would last about one or two minutes, enough to clearly hear the Russian language broadcast which, according to the WRTH 2005, runs 1200[!] kW).

I was also able to hear various Canadian and Cuban stations loud-and-clear.

I only spent about an hour and a half listening to the MW (0330 - 0500 UTC) but it was quite interesting. This was the first time, since I have owned it, that I have tried MW DXing with it (my receiver is an AOR AR7030 Plus).

In any event, it shows me that the Wellbrook ALA 330S is an adequate antenna for those who wish to do some casual (or maybe more) MW DXing.

Best,

Joe

Hiya, Joe...

Thanx for the confirmation.  I heard them ID, but I wasn't 100 % sure of what I heard.  I was using my R-75 and "Frankenstein" 200' roof wire antenna.  The audio was clear and the strength was about S-7 to S-9. There was some moderate QRN at times and it had constant fast fade in/out that was bordering on being able to be described as "flutter". I checked out the Passport blue pages and it shows as Radio Nacional, Brazil, so I figured I had my ID correct  They were indeed playing some great music.  I'll be returning to it regularly now as long as the signal holds up :-)

Thanx again !!!

Michael

Dear ShortwaveMan,

I don't know what your apartment is like or what you are prepared to do, but I had a similar problem. As a matter of fact, last year I was quite desperate. I live in a small townhouse and the community is a source of EXTREME local electrical noise, what with Christmas lights, computers, often-defective LP Sodium and Mercury Arc-vapor street lights, and high-tension lines not a quarter mile away. You can imagine what all of the above did to my SW listening. I won't go into the various "fixes" I tried over the years (they have been "posted" on this site and elsewhere), but I FINALLY found the one! It is the Wellbrook ALA 330S Active Loop Antenna.

You can investigate it here:

http://www.wellbrook.uk.com/

Note it is quite expensive (probably around $400 now, due to the poor dollar-to-pound ratio), somewhat convoluted to buy (I bought mine from THE SHORTWAVE SHOP in the UK, the only dealer which sells it. They accept credit cards. You can buy from the factory, but only with a check), and it's BIG - the loop is about 3-feet in diameter. I have mine mounted in my attic, but mounting is not critical. It COULD be mounted in your room (near a window) if your significant other is broad-minded, outside mounted on a deck, if you have one, or some other "creative" place,

This antenna is positively FANTASTIC. It dramatically lowers both atmospheric AND local electrical noise. In other words, it greatly increases the signal-to-noise ratio of the signal you are trying to hear.

An example: I live on the East Coast of the US, yet I have been able to regularly hear Radio Australia's 2200 - 2400 UTC  broadcast on 21740 kHz. The signal comes in at only S4 - S7, but is perfectly clear and fully listenable.

At the very least, look it up on the web.  I completely sympathize with your problem and I hope you are able to come up with a satisfactory solution.

Best,

Joe

Radio Nacional and Radio Nacional do Amazonia both come from Brasilia in the heart of Brazil. They have an extensive network of less powerful stations that operate the way our "am" stations do here, in providing coverage for their people. Those stations' signals don't die at the border <s> and if you like hunting for stations, they provide a good challenge.

Mike, this sounds as good as the "Fifty-foot Extension Cord" which actually allows ANY AC-powered radio (not only short wave receivers) to be moved ANYWHERE in a fifty-foot radius! (Watch out for walls or open windows.)

Anybody want to bid on one of those? My price is cheap but wait until you see my shipping charges!

Best,

Joe

Hi Eric,

I took your advice and put the comparison files on my web site. I made about a dozen more comparison recordings originally, but kept these as the main examples. Note that the recording level on the R-75 clips are somewhat low; bump up the volume on your MP3 player to hear the audio better.

All recordings were done with the receivers' mode (USB), bandwidth (3.3 or 4 kHz), and AGC (fast) matched as closely as possible.

1) All India Radio, Bangalore 9425 kHz, just past fade-in.

http://www.guyatkins.com/files/RX340_9425khz.mp3  mostly noise.

2) SABC Meyerton, 3320 kHz, during a poor propagation evening, an hour or so past Meyerton SR.

http://www.guyatkins.com/files/r75_3320khz.mp3  weak signal audio.

http://www.guyatkins.com/files/ra6790gm_3320khz.mp3   also weak, but slightly better on the Racal.

http://www.guyatkins.com/files/RX340_3320khz.mp3   mostly noise.

3) Example of Carl Moreschi N4PY's RX-340 front end modification. Mod is switched in and out on a weaker MW station that's 10 kHz away from a powerful local (I forget the call letters of the weak station, but it was in Nampa, Idaho). The poorer/weaker portions of audio are the RX-340 "barefoot" without the mod, presumably indicating desensing/RF blocking occurring.

SWS,
It's been about 30 years since I owned my DX-150A and I had forgotten about the antenna connection scheme.  Will rethink this while I read the other responses.

I lokked at that and am amazed that a balun can give 5dB gain!  What I would expect is that it could help in reducing the noise floor and thus sound like you have gain; or provide a better impedence match (at some frequency(ies) to allow more signal to pass - perhaps.  But gain, nope - I just don't see it unless I have totally missed out on some part of my radio education.

The amazing thing is that they actually believe what they are saying.

On the DX-160 there is an RF amplifier after the antenna input.  Its a small field effect transistor and is easy to overload with pre-amplified input.

If I remember correctly the antenna connection is also complicated by a switch which selects a ferrite rod for medium wave.

Actually, it's been almost 10 years and the d--- thing ought to be postponed AGAIN as it's obsolete even before it's introduced!

Hi Ace,

Michael heard the ID but wasn't sure what he heard. Portuguese is a little tough if you're not familiar with its "sound."

Do you remember "La Voz do Occident?" (I'm sure my spelling is off.)
Best,

Great! I'm glad you figured it out and got it working. All thanks though, go to Al, KA5JGV, who figured out what was causing the problem and shared the info with us here via a follow-up posting.

Huh?  If I'm mistaken, which could be, at least give me a hint why I'm wrong and I will follow up on it.    I know this isn't rocket science as I work with rocket scientists and many  know little about radio.
Until shown otherwise I stand by my statement that the balun will not add gain to the antenna - though it has other characteristics that will improve the received signal.

Have a good one DX,

Oh, ignore our professional idiot.

You did miss something, however. The impedence mismatch makes the energy transfer from the antenna to the receiver to be inefficient. 5 dB is just about right for any 9:1 matching transformer (from an end-fed wire to a 50 ohm load).

I'm not going to attempt to explain the theory behind it since I will certainly leave something out and the peanut gallery will come to life again, but think about SWR and reflected power and how bad the mismatch can be without the transformer vs. how bad it would be with the transformer.

For a practiacal demonstration try (BRIEFLY) to feed a speaker from a tube amp without using a matching transformer. (You'll want a blocking capacitor, though.)

No, no gain added to the antenna, but better power transfer to the radio from the antenna. 5 dB is what I've measured as well. I use ICE prepackaged transformers and Mini-Circuits transformers.

If it sold for $750 in the 1930's, it would cost about $8600 in today's dollars. $20K is really not much of an appreciation over 80+ years.

I heard this was an EU initiative. I don't know if RFI or DW, for example, observed the silence (if they did) at 1200 GMT or 1200 CET (GMT +1).

these addresses are by that reason often regarded as SPAM even if they are not. I am also staying away from them.

What I wrote was meant to indicate that this thread was about AFRTS carrying the NPR news feed. AFRTS is a part of the Defense Department, and if NPR's news coverage is considered reasonable and obviously even desirable, by the Defense Department, maybe the "slant" that RHF and you see in it is a product of your own extremist beliefs. Armed Forces Radio's audience is probably above average in education level, but it isn't an academic elite, and I don't think military personnel are particularly more liberal than the country at large.

Of course maybe it's one of them there secret plots. How's the hunt for the secret communist backers of Air America going?

There was a thread on tubes a month or two back. Just do a web search on "vacuum tubes" and you'll get a coupla dozen on-line vendors. I've bought from 3 or 4 that show up on the first page of the Yahoo search and they were all fine. Radio Daze at www.radiodaze.com and AES at www.tubesandmore.com pop to mind, but they're all ok. Check prices, they can vary a lot from vendor to vendor.

$500, huh? I don't know....$500 puts you within striking distance of quite a number of receivers, both portable and tabletop--many of which weren't made in China. I certainly wouldn't want an E1 from the first production run! Better to wait until they get the kinks worked out, say in 2008.

Yes, that reporter's question was typical of NPR correspondents, however, that's not a political matter, it doesn't indicate "left" or "right", it indicates an effort to evoke some emotion from the person being interviewed.
And, I really don't mean to start an argument with you, jd, honest, but your implication that the "political right" does not also prefer symbolism over substance is pretty doggone funny.

Again, your comment is relevant if your "lower power, please read" is equal to or less than 40.6 millionths of a Watt.

I'm certainly no expert on HIFER beacons, but I think it's safe to say they broadcast at a significantly higher power than 40.6 MILLIONTHS of a Watt.

The test of MW performance is daytime reception; at night you might hear anything with even so-so sensitivity.  All signals are locals, almost, when they're faded in.  The problem is getting rid of them, at night, mostly.

I find my ALA1530's are less sensitive in S/N than the McKay Dymek DA100E whips, more or less uniformly; but if you have an electrical noise problem, that can be otherwise.  My location is pretty quiet.

The built-in nulls in the loops though comes in very handy.  You can permanently get rid of the most annoying local station, leaving phasing to deal other problems.

Here you go...

''For each of the three misperceptions, the study found enormous differences between the viewers of Fox, who held the most misperceptions, and NPR/PBS, who held the fewest by far. Eighty percent of Fox viewers were found to hold at least one misperception, compared to 23 percent of NPR/PBS consumers. All the other media fell in between.

CBS ranked right behind Fox with a 71 percent score, while CNN and NBC tied as the best-performing commercial broadcast audience at 55 percent. Forty-seven percent of print media readers held at least one misperception.

As to the number of misconceptions held by their audiences, Fox far outscored all of its rivals. A whopping 45 percent of its viewers believed all three misperceptions, while the other commercial networks scored between 12 percent and 16 percent. Only nine percent of readers believed all three, while only four percent of the NPR/PBS audience did. ''

Because your Newsreader is going off the edge of the paper, much as you have driven the conversation off the edge of reality by proposing a return to a Babbage engine type voting machine.

Nobody puts important mail outside like that.  You drop it off at the ''Trust but verify''

-Ronald Reagan

''Dear Mr. President, Speaker Hastert, Senator Frist, Senator Reid, Ms. Pelosi, Mr. Delay:

We write because we believe there were numerous, serious election irregularities in the recent presidential election, which resulted in a significant disenfranchisement of voters. In particular, the massive and unprecedented extent of irregularities in Ohio raise grave doubts regarding whether it can be said the electors selected on December 13, 2004, were chosen in a manner that conforms to Ohio law, let alone federal requirements and constitutional standards. In this regard, we are attaching for your review and consideration an important and comprehensive Report regarding election law irregularities in Ohio prepared by the House Judiciary Committee Minority Staff.

As a result of these massive irregularities, we believe three important steps must be taken:

First, consistent with the requirements of the United States Constitution concerning the counting of electoral votes by Congress and Federal law implementing these requirements, some of us plan to challenge the presidential electors from the State of Ohio when Congress meets in joint session on January 6 at 1:OO P.M.

Second, Congress should engage in further hearings into the widespread irregularities reported in the recent presidential election. It is clear to us that the problems are serious enough to warrant the appointment of a joint Committee of the House of Representatives and the Senate to investigate and report back to the Members.

Third, Congress needs to enact further voting and election reforms to restore our people�s trust in our democracy and to make sure that these wide spread irregularities do not happen again.

There is no more important right in our democracy than the right to vote. We look forward to working with you on a bipartisan basis to strengthen and protect this right.

Not entirely true... those freq's may not be in use, but others are.

Think before you pound the keyboard, 'tard boy.

Now go tote your XM radio, and leave the shortwave to the big boys.

Here's the point...

That's as stupid as reports I've seen over the years from some folks claiming to be the 'first' to hear a particular station...

That of course is absurd... how did they know that no one else heard it?

Perhaps the 'first' to report hearing it to whomever they reported it to, but not necessarily the 'first' to hear it.

The same logic applies to this case.

Thank You for Providing a Clear Example of what the

This Whole Voting Issue is just so much Phony Political

Hi Jim,
My copy of Passport is out of date I think, but I see Sri Lanka BC in that vacinity but Passport does not show a transmission then. I also see R. Deutsche Welle in an unspecified language about then. Sri Lanka has a generally good signal out here on the West Coast int he mornings. Keep listening for a few days and see if an ID comes through for you .

I've changed outgoing text wrap on this machine to 80 characters, just for you.

Hopefully this won't screw up people who have mail programs that wrap text to fit their screen.

The fact the lever style voting machines have been around for a long time doesn't make them ineffective.  We use lots of old machine designs because we haven't found anything that does what they do better.

It would be interesting to see a survey on that, I doubt most people go to the post office for much of anything besides buying stamps or mailing packages. Around here, many grocery stores sell stamps as a convenience because folks just don't like going to the post office.

Would a stamp be considered a Poll tax?

Seriously, I think the system you're promoting is more expensive, less accurate, and much easier to tamper with than the one I've suggested.

Name a community where they've had "suspicious" election results, and I think you'll find the questions come from votes cast on some form of paper ballot, or an electronic voting machine.

Here's a story about how King county in Washington State had 3500 more votes than voters, casting doubt on the results of the Governors race.

Had exceptionally fine reception of African stations on 49m and 60m here in California, US on the morning of January 6, 2005.

Notably, Accra, Ghana on 4915 at about 0630z was extremely strong (s9+20) and easily heard in English, with the OM listing lottery numbers, IDs at 0631 and nifty music.  Best reception in recent memory.

Also, R. Burkina on 5030 at 0640z easily overpowered University Network, with strong S9 and clear signal in FF, interview with many mentions of Ouagadougou and discussion of radio presentations.  Never heard this well before.  This station lists as 50kW, but did they get a new transmitter or antenna?  This signal just kept getting better past 0700, with tres cool African music.

Other Africans on 4777, 5995 and 7125 also had good signals, somewhat better than commonly heard.  Did not try R. Bangui, Central African Republic on 31m but I'll bet pocket change that they were well heard too.

An ocean away, Arnie Coro at RHC reports on January 5 that R. Rebelde, Cuba, has a new 50kW transmitter on 5025 - how old?  Their signal seems newly potent...Arnie himself welcomes reception reports on R. Rebelde for QSLs.  Sure would like to hear R. Quillabamba again though...

Great. I noticed the same thing. I hit a couple Adventist World Radio signals from South Africa . I haven't been having much luck in the frequency area listed because of the dratted interference. Good job :)

Somebody posted the schematic here in the newsgroup a few months back. Interestingly simple set. It's got a tuned dual FET cascode RF amplifier. So a preselector or pre-amp won't benefit it too much. Then a single conversion to a ceramic IF filter (probably at 455 kHz). So it's performance is probably similar to a Grundig FR-200 or S350.

It's probably got more sensitivity than is really good for reception if there are any transmitters nearby. At least it's got an RF Gain control. Looking closer, part of the RF Gain control is a 2k ohm potentiometer right across the antenna terminals. Which go to an anti-parallel pair of diode to act as a protection device. Ugh.

Conclusion, you want to use as little antenna on this as you need to get the signals you want. Feed too much signal into this and, unless you turn down the RF Gain, you'll get mixtures of strong signals and images all over the dial.

The antenna terminals are set up so that it can use either an unbalanced (coax) or balanced antenna. For an unbalanced antenna (a directly connneted random wire, or coax), you hook the antenna connection to A1 (and the coax ground, to the ground terminal) and leave the jumper between A2 and ground).

For a balanced antenna, remove the jumper and hook the two antenna lines to A1 and A2. One such antenna is a folded dipole made of TV flatlead. But you'd need a lot of room and it would probably only get the best performance on one frequency band.

One antenna to try would be a small loop. Just a rectangle or circle of wire, 3-5 feet on a side, perhaps taped to a window, and the leadin formed by a twisted pair of the same wire, and hooked up as a balanced antenna to terminals A1 and A2.

Damn, and I wrote this before I'd even read RHF's posting. I should always remember to read the entire thread before replying.

So you trust the future of our country in computers running Windows?

''Blue screen of death crashes Gates at CES
Opening keynote does not go entirely to plan
Iain Thomson, vnunet.com 06 Jan 2005

Bill Gates's legendary luck failed him during his keynote presentation at the 2005 Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas.

His demonstration of Microsoft Media Center crashed during the presentation on integrating digital photography, and later a Microsoft product manager failed to access the internet with a Tablet PC.

A new game, Forza Motor Sport, also triggered the dreaded Windows blue screen of death.

The presentation started on a jokey theme, with late-night TV host Conan O'Brien presenting a mock version of his own show and a video diary of his and Bill's 'lost weekend' in Las Vegas.

"I got too drunk, I woke up with a hooker," O'Brien said. "Bill got too drunk, he woke up with an Apple computer."

O'Brien said that he was unable to criticise Microsoft because it had implanted a Pentium in his brain, and suggested that Gates should be played by Milhouse from The Simpsons.

But his banter was less welcome when things started to go wrong. "OK, and right now nine people are being fired," O'Brien said as they waited for a slide show to appear.

Gates traditionally has a reputation for being lucky at showing off software to its best effect.

A major slip occurred at a Windows 98 demo at Comdex in 1998 that went into blue screen mode, but Gates returned the next year to successfully show off the progress that had been made.

If you were a narc in Peru who wanted to say merry XMas to the kids back home, would you use an HF transceiver patched  through a Collins facility in Iowa or would you use  a satellite phone?

That would depend upon whether one had the satellite phone or not, and whether it was working. If not, I'm certain that the individual would call any which way they could.

Do you ever think at all, 'tard boy? Or are you permanently stuck on stupid and locked on dumb?

Now go tote it.

I'm reposting this message as I accidentally mistyped the frequency in the Subject line of the original message and added more info regarding the broadcast times.

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

Does anyone know thru actual listening what shortwave station(s) is using the frequency of 11955 kHz besides Deutsche Welle? I have a current issue of the WRTH and know what stations are listed as saying that they are going to use that frequency. There seems to be a 24-hour station on this frequency - at least from 1300 to 2400 GMT.

Why retube?  I think retubing is wasteful, unless you are using tubes still in production and somebody else is paying for them.

In my expirence, most old tubes in old radios are good.  Paper capacitors are the biggest problem by far, although I don't think your Drake has paper caps.  I've seen a higher percentage of drifted carbon compisition resistors than the percentage of weak tubes.

Trouble shooting by tube substitution is a valid procedure, but there's no need to have more than one of each tube number, and good used tubes work just fine for that purpose.

I've had good results from

Triode Electronics (mostly audio tubes)

Brent Jessee Recording (audio and radio)

Fair Radio Sales

ESRC

Hamfests

Ebay vendors

I've had generally good, but not perfect, results from Antique Electronics Supply. AES has a very large inventory of tubes and an inclusive catalog. The other vendors seem to try to beat the AES price.

I have lotsa QRM on 60 meters, and it's a real drag - but the MFJ-1026
I use helps a great deal with proper antennas.  Similar to the ANC-4.
I use an R75, and its noise blanker has also been helpful on this band, if not the coup-de-grace to noise.

Take a look at Universal's prices on the Icom R75, Yaesu FRG-100B, Palstar R30 and Satellit 800. All of these tabletops are available for $600 or less. As far as portables are concerned, the humble yet dependable Sangean ATS-909 is available for a mere $240. I don't know what Universal is selling the Sony ICF-SW07 for, but I'm sure it's less than $500 and the 07 will probably eat the E1 for breakfast on the SW bands. There are other alternatives as well, both new and used.

<<<<SNIP>>>>

This is too damn funny!

If you read the article, every one of the "misperceptions" they mention is simply a liberal talking-point not taken at face value.  OF COURSE they're going to agree with NPR!!!   Thank you for illustrating the point we were making, David.

For those of you too jaded to bother with David's propaganda, the points they take as fact are:

(1)  That US troops DID NOT find evidence of close pre-war links between Iraq and the al-Qaeda terrorist group (they have, and it has been extensively documented).
(2)  More carping about whether or not we found WMD's -- Some would argue that even the small quantities of sarin or other agents we have found would meet the "wmd" requirement.
(3)  World public opinion did not favor Washington's going to war with Iraq. This is a non-issue, since our allies DID.  Screw "world opinion"  -- I want what's best for the USA.  ("FranceGermanyRussia" and the usual US-haters (China, Syria, et. al) didn't.)

The funniest thing about this whole deal is that David will be too intellectually challenged to understand this.

This thing reminds me of the guy who came up with the tiny-tenna a few years ago and made a couple thou$sand$ selling them to shortwave radio listening PAY-triots and other like-minded suckers.

Isn't it just amazing how you can make big bucks from useless crap if you market the same to morons?

Bwaaa hahahahaha! I hope this guy sells 500 of em to the goofballs that listen to Alex Jones and Coast to Coast AM! I mean, why should C. Crane be the only guy on the block who sells chinzy Chinese made radios at a 2000% markup to geeks, dopes and PAY-triots...?

You should feel blessed. If he really gets upset, he does a 'LMFAO' and calls you a 'tard. His shadow 'beerbrain' usually follows right in step with an echo of the insults.

The 'Ace has been like that since the incident with the toilet at the Army base. His Platoon collectively slammed the seat on his head while he was trying to get a drink. He's never recovered and now gets a lifelong disability at the taxpayers' expense.

Being nice to him seems to make no difference

The first two problems are most likely occuring because the radio is a single conversion type (450~460 KHz IF only). Single conversion receivers are easily overloaded by any strong signal, and this can cause multiple images of the overloading station on all bands. It also will cause third order IM like you are describing.

The third is not uncommon with any radio which uses only an injected BFO signal instead of a true product detector.

The Degen, Kaito, and that sort are good for what they are, a bargain basement radio capable under most conditions of receiving the powerhouse shortwave stations. I have the little Jwin pocket radio which does fairly well in my area. Fortunately, I live in an area where only three strong MW signals are present, and I don't have overload problems with any of them (603, 972, and 1440 KHz, with 972 being by far the strongest).

Hi,

Well, as usual, I have another question for the experts.

When the Tsunami hit last week, I grabbed my shortwave and tried to find 'live' info as fast as I could. Understanding that power might not be available in the region, I just tried some of the larger outlets and didn't hear anything I couldn't hear on CNN or CBC. In fact, even during the 'shock and awe' campaign - I was not really hearing up-to-date info from a foreign country. So, I gotta' ask:

What's the secret? I'm pretty new to shortwave and really might be expecting too much, but I assume using SW for local / regional updates on serious news is part of the fun. I understand the time differences and programing schedules, but I've never heard "Up to the Minute" disasters, assasinations, etc. I mean God forbid this stuff happens, in fact I hope there won't be earthquakes or tornados - but they certainly do happen and I bought my radio exactly to hear these broadcasts.

Would anyone please provide me with some instruction, a weblink or some plain common sense in trying to listen to radio ' Live as it Happens'.

I constantly read posts on folks hearing the USS YorkTown on XXX USB, but when I try to tune in, I've never heard the ship. (I do understand how to enable these modes on my radio.) Do I need a mega antenna - I only use the coil-out wire or whip. However, if I can receive Radio Japan clearly, surely I should be able to hear anything inbetween that location. (T.X.Wattage / time of year / weather all being equal - not that they are either.)

Can anyone help me advance to the next level of this hobby? Yes, VOA and Radio Canada are great, but I know there's more and I wanna' hear it. And, I'm willing to put the effort in - it's a great hobby.

I live on the east coast of Canada and use a Sony ICF GR7600GF with syncro-lock when DX'ing.

Thanks, any help would be great.
Mike T.

Why do you think the first RF circuit in the DX-160 precludes using a passive preselector?

I have a fear of being hysterically laughed at.

That, and judging by how a certain 'expert' behaves on this group, I'd hate to think what a REAL one would act like. One shudders at the thought..

Well, she and a few others certainly 'stepped in it' yesterday, that's for sure.

Rush certainly had a lot to say about it on his program, and most of it made sense to me.

I'd certainly like to see some Democrats bring up the issue of the manufactured votes in the gubenatorial race in Washington State. But we all know that's not going to happen.

Bottom line in all of this is that had John Fraud Kerry won the election, none of this would have been brought up.

When all other things are equal, the antenna will make the difference between hearing a faint signal and not hearing it. As far as the "mega" part goes, if you mean an large antenna on a 200' tower or a huge beam-- well, to be sure, those would make a huge difference, but since few of us seem to have that sort of room available (not to mention time and money) even a longish wire placed somewhere outdoors will probably help quite a bit.

Thank you.

Some of us have been concerned for years that the Federal Govt was building a national propaganda network using our tax dollars (direct and indirect).

More recently, "public" stations, have been carrying out-and-out commercial ads (which are FCC-prohibited) in competition with profit-making broadcasters. All of this in the "educational band   88-92 MHz)".

How much education have you heard on radio the last 10 years? Five minutes?

If "Public Radio" were happening in Russia, we'd laugh at it as a government propaganda machine.

Here in the US, NPR/CPB decide to emphasize "talk & news" and 800 stations drop music and follow?

It stinks. And the LPFM initiative is being crushed.

An interesting aspect of FCC rules supporting the incumbents is that FM "Class D" channels, which cover a small community, give preference to out-of-area existing broadcasters, because they can have multiple translators on multiple channels running 250 watts each, while LPFM applicants are limited to a single 100 watt channel and they are required to originate ONLY local programming, while the translators are prohibited from originating local programs.

Given that CNN, Fox, and the other big networks have reporters, and stringers, all over ther world, they often have better news resources then local broadcasters.
To get the "low" power regional SW outlets you will need to move to an area with very low noise.  But even this will not give you world wide access. The big boys, NSA etc, have monitoring sites at MANY locations because no one location, no mater how good the equipment, can receive everywhere in the world.
About the best most of us can do, is to put up a 70~150' "long" wire antenna, away from noise sources in your home, coupled with a 9:1 tranformer, using good coax to your receiver.  I use the double shielded
coax with braid and foil, more to keep noise out then to stop any loss.
I think John Doty has the "best" single solution:

http://www.anarc.org/naswa/badx/antennas/low-noise_antenna.html
And his 9:1 transformer is a very usefull additon:
http://www.anarc.org/naswa/badx/antennas/SWL_longwire.html

Yes, the H800 is a good antenna, especially below 5000 khz. I have one and use it from time to time. Unlike some other active whips, the H800 is astoundingly quiet when properly situated. It's very short and will be as quiet as its location. Very handy!

At the same time, when all other things are equal, the receiver will (can) make the difference between hearing a faint signal and not hearing it...

And, at the same time, when all other things are equal, the listeners location and noise level will (can) make the difference between hearing a faint signal and not hearing it...

It's all in the variables.

The 41/40m band has been going real long  in the evenings. Quite often I won't hear anything closer than 800 miles or so all night unless it's ground wave.

We go through the WBCQ (7415 and perhaps other frequencies) not being heard 'close in' complaints every year around this time. It's fairly normal propagation.

What are your circumstances? Do you live in a relatively quiet area? In a house or a condo? Do you have a large yard? Knowing some of these details would help.

The Sony 7600GR is a great radio, but it's not intended to be a DX machine. In order to get the most of out of it, see how long a length of wire you can attach to it before you have problems with overload. You might also considering getting the AN-LP1 active loop, which works well with the 7600GR.

Eventually, I predict you'll want a more robust receiver, since this will both expand your listening capabilities and at the same time increase the number of antenna options open to you. If you're patient, you can find something nice on ebay for a reasonable price. (Do you homework though, as it's also possible to get ripped off this way.)

Eton is becoming a big distributor of shortwave radios. Will they be the survivor as companies like Sony pull out of shortwave radio production? The latest Passport to World Band Radio may give some indicaTION. It was chock full of advertisements for Eton...the same 3 advertisements repated page after page after page, but no others that I remember. Is PBWR owned by Eton???

I rather doubt that PWBR is owned by Eton, however they obviously purchase a lot of advertising.

Tongue in cheek comment.  Still I was taken aback by the repetitive advertising by one company.  Almost every third page was a full page ad by Eton - over and over.  Made me think of the magazine Pentax once published.  It contained good information on photography, but lots of Pentax ads too.

A BUZZFLASH EDITORIAL

I think it's safe to say, from stitching together news accounts, that the Bush twins don't practice sexual abstinence, aren't teetotalers, and have indulged from time to time in marijuana use -- and that's just what we know.

Dear me, does that make them victims of the liberal press? Or does it just prove that if George and Laura can't get their own daughters to practice their calculated hypocritical political "values" that it is the Bush rhetoric that is out of sync with society?

We ask this rather obvious question because it leads into an important point, one that the right wing has been tossing out like red meat to culturally populist fundamentalist Christian carnivores for years. You know, the guys who read Playboy, watch raunchy FOX television programming, swear in front of their kids, go to Hooters -- and then nod when the preacher discusses how depraved American society has become.

The American press isn't liberal. It is merely secular and modern, which does indeed make it "liberal" to the right wing amen chorus that sings in the GOP gospel pundit and think tank choir. If it's not pre-enlightenment and creationist in its outlook, it's "liberal."

In short, a liberal press to the right wing really means a secular, contemporary media that reflects the America of 2005 and not the Puritanical excesses of the Salem Witch trials.

To show you just how medieval the perspective of the Bushevik GOP is, we found this footnote in a book that we have recently been referencing called "Pols: Great Writers on American Politicians":

"Like every other man of intelligence and education, I do believe in organic evolution," Woodrow Wilson said in 1912. "It surprises me that at this late date such questions should be raised." Campaigning for president in 2000, George W. Bush said, "[O]n the issue of evolution, the verdict is still out."

Ah, yes, a liberal press must be one that reports on scientific advancements that bolster the theory of evolution, rather than balancing every story with a "creationist" perspective that was already outdated in the days of Woodrow Wilson.

Or a liberal press must be one that accepts "hot chick" ads from companies that contribute heavily to Republicans and sell their products to men using suggestive poses and language.

Or a liberal press must be one that reports about the poor needing housing, Veterans needing medical care, and cutbacks in school funding.

Or a liberal press must be one that acknowledges the accomplishments of women as independent thinkers and achievers.

Or a liberal press must be one that reports about gender discrimination in the workplace.

Or a liberal press must be filled with models with a come-hither look striking poses between ads for all sorts of beauty products that help make the American economy hum.

The reason that there will always be a so-called "liberal" press in America, is due, in large part, to the fact that America is a consumer society -- and a media that merely reflects radically fundamentalist self-proclaimed Christian values would lead to an economy that would be dead in the water. You can only sell so many plastic dashboard Jesuses.

The American economy is created on two basic premises: 1) Most consumer items you buy are disposable, so you need to buy more of them at some point; and, 2) Advertising convinces you to buy things that you don't really need, but come to want as a result of a "created need or desire." That's the role of Madison Avenue.

And Madison Avenue isn't going to have a very successful time selling abstinence books, shutting down the Sunday football libidinous beer ads, and cutting down on sexy ads for clothes and perfume. Just ask the Bush twins. They know what we're talking about. Because they are listening to Madison Avenue, not to Mom and Dad.

So the so-called "liberal" media is consumer driven, and that rings the cash registers. After all, it's advertising that pays the bills and pumps the profits for newspaper, television and radio -- and if it doesn't sell, it's not going to become an advertisement. And then there's no profit to put into campaign contributions to the Republican Party. Just ask Clear Channel or Rupert Murdoch.

The whole right wing rant about the liberal media, as author Thomas Frank has pointed out, is just an effort to exploit a sense of alienation felt by middle and working class Americans. Sex sells and the Republican hacks don't plan on getting in the way of a politically supportive media getting a bang for its buck.

Besides, who do you think is watching the "hot" soap operas and FOX television programming anyway? How about polling the Republican voters on that one. We don't know anyone who watches that junk.

Besides which, while the media generally reflects a secular, contemporary society that brings in profits that often end up in Republican coffers, it is -- ironically -- simultaneously generally pro-Bush and pro-Republican in its political reporting. That is because the media is now largely a corporate profit center that benefits from Bush's pro-corporate and pro-wealthy tax policy.

Although Kerry received the lion's share of top newspaper editorial endorsements, it's the news sections that follow the White House spin on Iraq -- and have given Bush the biggest break in the world on his chronic lying, deceptions, tortured lexicon, dumb statements, and scripted news conferences. And television "news" is even worse, basically giving Bush and the Pentagon carte blanche to pass off propaganda as news in staged Hollywood set types of interviews and photo-ops.

Editorial pages don't influence mass America much anymore anyway. That is why you can have a newspaper like the New York Times with a traditionally liberal editorial page that does a series on the need for voting reform, while you have a news section that, for the most part, has virtually ignored the voting irregularities of the 2004 election or treated such reports with skepticism and derision.

The so-called "liberal press" is really in the pocket of the GOP when it comes to electoral politics. And unless America formally becomes the Christian nation that Antonin Scalia, John Ashcroft and Bush desire it to officially be, it is likely to remain a curious hybrid of secular social reporting -- larded with a heaping dollop of sex --- and partisan White House political cheerleading.

Of course, if you need your fix of Christian news, just turn on Pat Robertson, "Praise Jesus," and get out your B.S. meter.

As for the Bush twins, we don't think that they will be running around the tequila party circuit anytime soon singing, "Abstinence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder."

But they will be good consumers, which is what the media is all about nowadays, along with reflecting the White House party line of the day.

And coughing up millions to the GOP come campaign time.

Today, A Prairie Home Companion is heard by over 4 million listeners each week on over 558 public radio stations, and is heard abroad on America One and the Armed Forces Networks In Europe and the Far East.
Keillor remembers, "When the show started, it was something funny to do with my friends, and then it became an achievement that I hoped would be successful, and now it's a good way of life."

A Prairie Home Companion is produced by Prairie Home Productions, and distributed nationwide by American Public Media. The program is underwritten by Lands' End Direct Merchants and Select Comfort.

Michael - dxAce does sometimes come across as terse and mocking, whether intended or not.  His online persona appears to be slightly impatient.  After awhile, you can learn to get used to it, accept it, and extract from it whatever good information there is - and there is often quite a bit.  Once you get beyond the affectation, it all settles into place.

Rest assured that, for most of us, your post made sense.

Brasilia has been a powerhouse on 11780 now for awhile.  After some years' absence, when I first restarted the radio hobby back in 2001, I was surprised by the potency of its signal compared to the mini-Brazilians I had heard in the past.  Too bad RAE Bueno Aires on 11710 cannot do as well - it's signal, formerly a good one, is tough these days.

Not only that, but I have noticed that especially when the solar storm levels become high and polar propagation is subdued, the tropical and trans-equatorial routes seem to be enhanced.  Then, Brazil comes through even better, and the itty bitty stations from CA and SA (and Africa too) become more listenable.  YMMV depending on latitude and location.

Back during the first Gulf War, I was able to hear scud alerts on Kol Israel Radio and Saudi Arabia. That was pretty intense... music or programing interrupted by a loud tone (similar to our EBS alerts on radio/TV), followed by excited instructions being given.

And all the military nets went nuts those first few days too! Aircraft being diverted and everything else.

There was certainly some good listening back then.

Cycle 23 started in May 1996 with the monthly SSN at 8.0 and peaked in April 2000 at 120.8. The next solar minimum will likely occur sometime in 2006 with cycle 24 peaking in 2010.

Who cares what garbage sites you bring up. I never see them on TV or reported. But I have seen a *coverup by the church *higher ups to allows catholic priests to be  moved to different locations so they can suck young boys cocks and fuck them in the rectum like good boys of G-D.

Here's the cover up of 13 faggot catholic "men of G-d" who sucked young boys cocks and/or placed their dicks in innoccent boys asses. Isn't it nice for a young lad to come to a church for guidance and direction and get molested and their penises sucked by these catholic men of G-d?
http://www.buzzle.com/editorials/10-16-2002-28359.asp

More cock sucking coverups by the Vatican :)

http://www.ianpaisley.org/article.asp?ArtKey=silent

Here's a whole BIG list of catholic homosexual faggot priests who like to suck young childrens cocks. Funny they don't like girls at all.........

Are these "goy cocksuckers"?

http://www.mako.org.au/holyhellc1.html

I betcha more of your "men of G-d" have swallowed more young boys cum per capita then any other race of rats on earth??

I was wrong. It seems there are killers among these life ruiners. They like to molest little children {boys} and suck the innocents out of them killing them for life. What a bunch of good guys. They make life on earth warm and safe for the little ones.You must be proud of your religion and men of G-d....

If he thought that he set me straight, he was mistaken. You did not indicate that you heard an ID, and for him to state that you did is just plain crazy, how would he know, based upon your post?

Your second post never arrived here...

But if you did indeed hear them ID, then why did you ask in the first place?

That's a simple question only you will be able to answer.

Try reading the line from the second post again that I have in quotes above... I do not speak the language and was unsure of what I heard.   Why bother having a sw news group if  legitimate on topic questions and answers are going to be mocked and invalidated by others ???

I'm not mocking or invalidating anything. Perhaps YOU need to go back and read
MY original post.

Bottom line, had you indeed ID'd it, you would not have had to ask the original question.

Pretty simple, in my view.

Yes.... Exactly... If I was sure of what I heard I'd have wrapped up my ID.  I was not 100 % sure as you now know, and I decided to post the question in hopes that I would get further confirmation of what I thought I was hearing from other ng posters.... Your antagonistic post stated that I should "actually try listening".  Your response would suggest to me that you think I did not or would not try listening to ID it myself.  I did indeed try listening and I did indeed hear them ID, but I was unsure of what they said.  I also checked the Passport blue pages too, which gave me further indication that it was Radio Nacional Da Amazonia.  What is wrong with posting my question to help confirm the log and why do you assume I did not try listening  ???

Maybe I'm just a pessimist, but I have a bad feeling about the E1's first production run. So, I wouldn't want to 'take the plunge' too early in the game. On the other hand, unless lots of people start buying this radio after its release, there won't be a second production run.

In the photos I've seen, the radio looks fairly big and fairly heavy.
It's body appears to be all (or almost all) plastic, with lots of knobs sticking out and a really large LCD screen--just waiting to get scratched up.

Let's face it: A Grundig it AIN'T.

I'm not a big fan of the Satellit 800, but I bet it's still in production long after the E1 has bitten the dust.

Might want to scan 15 meter ham band every so often for VQ9LA on Diego Garcia. I heard he was on 80 meters in December but that would be a tough catch. I talked to him on 20 meters a few years ago but propagation was much better then....

Where I work they installed tv's in the cafeteria at some point and they carried CNN for a couple of years, then suddenly switched to Fox about 6 months ago. Then about a month ago they switched back to CNN. Maybe Nickelodeon is next.

I don't think price is the issue. The two NPR news programs are pretty expensive (at least that's what the local affiliate tells you when it's fundraising time). Also I don't know what kind of budget constraints AFRTS operates under. Your point that NPR provides one of the only national-scale radio news feed is certainly well-taken though.

Nonetheless, I think if NPR really were as biased as some on this group think, some stink would have been raised in the Pentagon. They don't have to offer four hours of news a day. Fox has a radio feed, on satellite, maybe they can switch to that. Probably make some of the posters on this thread happier.

Heard someone on WBCQ saying there were problems with the "D" layer in the ionosphere...
- which is probably why they ( WBCQ) dissappear at around 7:00 P.M. EST..

Anyone have a clue as to Why WBCQ , broadcast from Maine,has been skippings over the Northeast for the last 3 or so months....?

Problems in the "D" layer ??? Hmmm.... The "D" layer is the lowest part of the ionosphere and it exists only in the day time. When the sun is above the horizon is charges up the ionosphere and the "D" layer is created. The "D" layer attenuates lower frequencies. Thats why most everything below a given frequency can't be heard during the day time while stuff higher up on the bands is tight enough to squirt through.

Is the signal going long at night ??? That happens whey the signal travels higher up in the ionosphere on its first trip up and is reflected back at an angle that skips right over the close areas. Maybe that is what is going on.

OK. I guess I don't really disagree with what you're saying. While NPR may be more or less a liberal outlet, or at least have a liberal sensibility, its news reporting is more complete than mostly anything else in broadcast, and they do make an effort to represent both sides of issues which are controversial. Back when my company was piping Fox news into our cafeteria, most of their "news" coverage during the election run-up seemed to be of the "John Kerry, threat or menace?" variety.

By the way, even though RHF likes your logic and reasoning (kiss of death right there), your rooster analogy was totally inapt. The rooster argument is a classic "post hoc ergo procter hoc" while mine might be judged a "non sequitur."

I don't know if these are passive enough or not.

I live in Korea and bought my DE1103 from liypn.
My radio was manufactured by degen on 7, 17, 2004.

My local power house mediumwave stations are on 1323 and 1224 kHz.
1323kHz transmitter is located near my house.

1st weak point : 1323kHz HLKH is heard over overall shortwave spectrum with rod antenna fully extended or wire antenna connected.
It's annoying me. This makes my 1103 useless.
My 7600gr radio doesn't show this strange phenomenon.

2nd weak point : two signals are heard on 1422 kHz with 1103's internal ferrite bar in day time.
I think it is 3rd order product. (1323*2)-(1224)=1422.
But with my 7600gr, the ghost is barely audible on 1422 kHz.

3rd weak point : SSB sound is always distorted with very strong signal. I thought my 1103 was defective, but I found this 3rd weak point wes seen in Passport2005 review. maybe it is common problem on all de1103 radios.

Passport review says 1103's dynamic range is superior, but why does 2nd weak point occur?

Is there anyone who experiences the 1st weak point or explains me why this annoying phenomenon happen? The annoying problem is not included in Passport review2005.
I bought a defective unit from liypn?????

I'm satisfied with my 1103, but experiencing the three annoying points on my 1103, I can't trust Chinese products.

"Coax-Seal" Sealant & "Stuf" for your Shortwave Listener
(SWL) Antenna's RF Connections [Weather Proofing]

MIKE,

It is Not good to use because it contains Chemicals that can cause the 'mechanical' Electrical Connections to "Corrode" {form an oxide} that will 'inhibit' the Electrical Conductivity of the mechanical Electrical Connection.

However,  If Silicon Sealer is 'all-you-got':

1.  First wrap the 'mechanical' Electrical Connections with Black Electrical Tape.

2.  Second use a Brush to Paint-Smear the Silicon Sealer all over the Electrical Tape and an Inch or two beyond.

THE BETTER IDEA IS TO USE "COAX-SEAL" SEALANT
The-Better-Way is to use "Coax Seal" as others have recommended here.

TAKING THE EXTRA-STEP IS "STUF" {In-a-Tube}
STUF Dielectric "Water Proofing Filler" for Coax Connectors
STUF => http://tinyurl.com/5gktb

- Stuf contains Teflon.
- Just fill the coax connector with STUF and tighten.
- STUF closely simulates this material used in Coax Cable's Dielectric Properties, minimizing the initial insertion signal losses while maintaining signal level over time with the aging of the connection.

I have some 70 ohm cable that I plan to use for the lead in.

I also will use a 70 ohm to 300 ohm tv transformer as a balun.

Any recodmindations on what I should use to protect the

I was told the house hold silicon sealer is not a good choice?

Unlike Larry you at least acknowledge the leftward slant but I perceive that it is a little more than slight.

The hosts and the people they interview are liberal elitists whether they know what they are talking about or not.

The right wing radio I listen to is Sean Hannity because he has people in the white house on his show speaking on current events unlike the continuous drone of failed or unproven liberal ideas the elitists like babble on about.

> Yep, it sure is unfair that those libs on NPR get to do what they do.

Yeah it's unfair my tax dollars go to broadcasting ignorant thought.

AFRTS is a part of the Defense Department, and if NPR's news coverage is considered reasonable and obviously even desirable, by the Defense Department, maybe the "slant" that RHF and you see in it is a product of your own extremist beliefs. Armed Forces Radio's audience is probably above average in education level, but it isn't an academic elite, and I don't think military personnel are particularly more liberal than the country at large.

There is nothing extremist about my thinking. I'm very middle of the road and conservative in my thinking. The liberal crap generally propagated on NPR are a collection of failed or unproven ideas that don't work. Conservative ideas are sneered at by most on NPR most of the time.

The fact that the NPR is on AFRTS is just an example of bureaucratic incompetence not that NPR news coverage is reasonable or desirable. You drew a wrong conclusion.

The only secret plot around here is you playing a Troll. You are not stupid so what is your point arguing NPR does not have a leftist slant?

> Of course maybe it's one of them there secret plots. How's the hunt

Going pretty good. I was listening to those air america jackass's the other day sporting german accents portraying the current administration. Very un-funny stuff.

Once upon a time long long ago in the year of '83 Sony introduced the first of several successful compact digital sw receivers.  Long out of production it is venerated by many swl's as an early and possibly first example of how miniaturized electronics and thoughtful design could result in a high performing and pocketable shortwave radio.  It occupies such a warm place in the heart of at least two swl's that one has bandied about the idea of restoring a 7600D.

That actually did suck. WNYC dropped all of its daytime music

Darren,

I suspect it was a planned diversion.  You know the old saying, "If you don't like the message kill the messenger!"

Looking back at the subject you realize this thread was about what "Jews" call non-Jews.  As I understand it, there's quite a controversy about who is a real Jew.  Thirty years ago few people would have given a second thought to saying they were gay or had a gay old time.  Now, almost everyone thinks several times about saying it whether they are queer or straight.  That part of the language has been commandeered. Such is the case with the word Jew.

I really like my Sony 2010, even for SSB utilities. The 100 Hz resolution seems to work well for about 98% of the SSB voice signals, but I wonder if anyone has had any luck copying CW, RTTY, FAX, NAVTEX with a decoder?

I watched the last hour of a 5-day auction for a Sony ICF-2010. The opening bid was set at $150. No one placed a bid until the last ten seconds of the auction. And the winner got the radio for $150 plus $13 shipping. The seller has a 99.7% rating and he even offers a 7 day money back guarantee. The radio was listed in the right category. Yet it sold for just $150. Strange indeed.

Oh, here's the link:
http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=5741621180

Maybe a lower opening bid would have been more successful.

I use a Kenwood R2000 with 50Hz tuning resolution.
Worked great for RTTY, both baudot and ASCII, and for HF AX25. I have used severl different home brew RTTY demods and a MFJ1278. I had very good results on HF FA, mainly weather, with the JV?FAX program.
The only thing that might bite you is narrow, <200Hz, shift. A lot of hams run 170HZ and that was a little dicey in bad band conditions.
More important then super fine, 10Hz or better tunning, is that the reciever not drift. Drift will get you chasing your tail real fast.
CW, unless machine sent, is hard to get above ~70% decode accuracy. Too many hams have lousy "fists" that make machine decoding, or even ear decdoing, and interesting proposition. Perhaps the decoders have improved.
Good luck.

What this means, of course, is that the same neoconservative God-fearing Republicans who pontificate on how moral and righteous they are secretly live it up in their private lives. This seems to be news to David, which is surprising. It is nothing new-novels written in the 1920s exposed this pervasive American moral hypocrisy. The poor have always believed that they should be moral and righteous, because that's what their preachers told them. And while they were trying to live up to their leaders' impossible moral standards, the leaders-rich people whose wallets were made fat off the labor of the poor, and preachers whose wallets were made fat off the Sunday donations of the poor-broke every moral rule that those leaders had written down, lived it up on the righteous man's dime, and then got the righteous poor to give more of their hard earned money for "good causes" that included the finest women and booze money could buy. The poor, of course, were not invited to the party-no, they had to "stay moral", abstain from smoking and liquor and drugs and sex and good food while the rich had all of those in abundance. This not only continues to this day, but has been the norm all throughout history-in Aztec Mexico, the king had 400 wives while a peasant would be killed for trying to marry wife number two. At least in today's Western Civilization, the peasants have decided to get in on the act, even though their food and drugs and women are of lower quality than those of the rich. The sad thing is that there are still preachers out there (not necessarily in a church) who proclaim morals while living immorally, and flocks who still bust their butts trying to live by the nonexistent morals of the preachers. The flocks numbers have lessened, but they're still there.

I understand that the cold heat soldering iron "is not recommended for electronics."  So, go ahead and solder a terminating resistor, but don't go and solder next to an IC--for one, this iron is not grounded.

THIS is exactly the type of radio listening I'm hoping to hear!

So far, some great help and links and I appreciate that. What are the 'Military Nets'...can I just Google and find some info? I also have a 'communications receiver' (A fancy way of saying a 150 khz to 1.2 GHZ radio.) Also, I live in a big city - so the local RF noise floor is pretty brutal. I run with a long wire - supplied with the Sony GR - but it's only used indoors. Would it be worthwhile stringing up some generic wire and appropriate coax just for the hell of it? Actually, I'm gonna' try this first - it's cheap and easy! Opinions. My feeling is the antenna is almost more important that the radio itself - gotta' try that long wire this weekend.

You help is really appreciated - please get back to me on the Military Net. I'm very curious what type of listening I might expect. (If I'm able.) If I'm considering a different radio, we're talking about the really expensive stuff right? I realise those radios are not priced because they have 'rack ears' of look cool - perhaps this will be my 2nd course of action. Interesting stuff shortwave.

Warm regards,
Mike T

Where?  All I've seen is evidence to the contrary.  Besides, that was not the question asked in the PIPA study.

The question asked was "How likely is it that Saddam Hussein was personally involved in the September 11th Terrorist attacks?"

That's a very different question from the one you assert. And Fox News viewers consistently got the answer wrong(67%), while NPR listeners consistently got it right(84%).

> (2) More carping about whether or not we found WMD's -- Some would argue that even the small quantities of sarin or other agents we have found would meet the "wmd" requirement.

"Some" would argue incorrectly, if they were to make that argument. The simple and indisputable fact is that the Bush administration's dire claims about Iraqi stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction have decisively been proven false by the CIA's post-invasion Duelfer investigation.[1]

> (3) World public opinion did not favor Washington's going to war with Iraq. This is a non-issue, since our allies DID. Screw "world opinion" -- I want what's best for the USA.

Whether or not it matters to you, it remains a clear fact that majority world opinion opposed the Iraq invasion and continues to oppose the occupation.

The PIPA report[2] you are lying about was not "propaganda", but a studied and well-documented look at the real world. That you are uncomfortable enough with the reality it reveals to insist upon lying about it publicly, when your lie is easily disproven by simply reading the readily-available report, says much more about you than it says about the study.

[1] From <http://edition.cnn.com/2004/WORLD/meast/10/06/iraq.wmd.report/>:

George Bush's War of Choice on Iraq is a totally unnecessary war.
Every life lost, every limb lost, every disfigurement, every disability caused there is more blood on George W. Bush's hands, and on the hands of everyone who voted for George W. Bush.

The more you know, the less likely you were to vote for Bush.

Picked some up a while back at Menard's (local home-depot kind of store).
Gardner-Bender Silicone Fusion Tape, part # HTP-1010. Thinner than you specify, though, but works a treat.

I'm having the same problem here in south-west Missouri- 7415 goes away during the early to mid-evening. Thats something like 1200 miles. So I thought the problem was more likely with the station.

I know that feeling. Last time I cut thin but long pieces of paper and stuck them in as I wound. The wire will pinch the paper to the form. After it's all wound and done, pull out the paper strips. Write down the # turns on the strips at each tap as you go.

That's pretty certain. I worked at a eBay consignment store, and that was what we told all our customers.

I had an item I personally sold once that I wanted $75 for. I put the opening bid at $69.99 (people like the .99). No bids. Then relisted it at $9.99. Sold for over $100.

Amateur satellites 'Ralphie' and 'Sparkie' were launched on 21 December but unfortunately US Air Force officials have now acknowledged that an "anomaly" occurred and the two nanosats were lost after not reaching orbit. The satellites' mission was to conduct a technical investigation to demonstrate packet radio for inter-satellite links using a frequency of 437.5MHz.

Congratulations to the American CQ Amateur Radio magazine, which celebrates its 60th anniversary this month. Amateurs who have had an association with CQ, as a staff member, contributing editor or author may sign "/60" after his or her callsign in those countries where it is permitted, during the first 60 days of 2005. Certificates will be available for certain numbers of contacts made with these stations. The CQ club station WW2CQ will also be activated from various parts of the United States during the special event period. Complete rules for the 'CQ Gang' 60th anniversary activity are in the December issue of CQ magazine and on the magazine's website.

Putting an emoticon next to an insult

SB PROP ARL ARLP001
ARLP001 Propagation de K7RA

Happy New Year! Not much to say about solar numbers or propagation this week compared to last, except that Thursday, January 6 had wonderfully quiet geomagnetic numbers. Both mid-latitude and the planetary A index were 4, and for most of the three-hour periods the K index was 0 or 1.

Of course, sunspot numbers will continue their decline for the next couple of years, but at least we can count on better conditions for the near term as the hours of daylight lengthen.

Because the year is now 2005, we can tally up numbers for the previous year and compare them with the past to try to get a feeling for Cycle 23's decline. These quarterly and yearly averages are made from the daily sunspot and solar flux data reported at the end of each bulletin.

>From the third quarter of 2003 through the fourth quarter of 2004, average daily sunspot numbers were 110.2, 99.2, 72.9, 71.3, 69.3, and 61. The average daily solar flux for the same period was 120.8, 137.4, 111.1, 99.5, 111 and 104.8.

Both the quarterly sunspot numbers and flux values have declined steadily, although there are some variations, such as solar flux in the fourth quarter of 2004 being higher than it was in the second quarter.

Average daily sunspot numbers for the years 2000 through 2004 were 173, 170.3, 176.6, 109.2 and 68.6. Average daily solar flux for the same five years was 179.6, 181.6, 179.5, 129.2 and 106.6. We can see the steady decline with each calendar year, and this should continue through the end of next year, 2006.

Now for conditions over the short term, a week ago it looked like solar flux should stay above 100 over the following 10-12 days. Now the last of sunspot 715 is disappearing around the edge of the sun, and it looks like solar flux should stay around 85 with sunspot numbers below 40 over the next week.

Saturday, January 8 could see some unsettled to active geomagnetic conditions, and January 13 could see unsettled conditions as well. Quiet days are expected January 10-11.

Alan Beck, VY2WU from Prince Edward Island wrote in response to last week's mention of 60 meters. He said in Northern Canada 60 meters is used for "bush radio," and he told a story about Inuit hunters in Nunavut using 5.2 MHz SSB at 10 watts to call home from the ice.

Barry Roseman, W0LHK of Stilwell, Kansas wrote to say he was on 60 meters the first day it opened for U.S. hams. Barry says only four stations have worked all states on 60 meters: K7NN, N1UU, K4AVC, and himself, W0LHK. His best DX was G0HNW in Yorkshire. Barry has used various dipole antennas and a quarter-wave vertical, and says he often works mobile stations.

If you would like to comment or have a tip, email the author at, k7ra@arrl.net.

For more information concerning propagation and an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin see the ARRL Technical Information Service propagation page at, http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/propagation.html .

Sunspot numbers for December 30 through January 5 were 34, 60, 51, 52, 43, 30 and 15 with a mean of 40.7. 10.7 cm flux was 100, 98.5, 98.9, 100, 94.2, 88 and 88, with a mean of 95.4. Signal improved on 9335 in the last half hour of the transmision, and ended at 1355 with s/off announcements.

Then into French on 9335 at 1400.

I didn't hear them at all on 11710. I did hear a single broadcast on both 9325 and 13760, but it was not in English (or I don't think it was, though the QRN was pretty intense and it could have been someone with a thick accent).

On the other hand, between 1200 and 1300 I heard BBC and Radio Australia relays on 5020 khz. I wanted to catch a station ID, but the signal eventually washed out. I wonder if this was the Solomon Islands.

I don't see 7340 on the LP sked, though they are on 7337. Coincidence? And figuring the vagaries of propagation in, maybe LP isn't even worried about any interference?

VOR is on 7340. LP is on 7337 which is obscured (at least on my RX) in the LSB of VOR in wideband AM mode, until you tune to 7337 and put the BFO on.

The pyropen junior and the ultratorch are very good and stand up well in daily use.

For somewhat lighter usage though, the radio shack 64-2188 [sold under several other names as well] works surprisingly well for its price -- and is quite compact.  There are even hot air and hot knife tips available for this model, but not from radio shack [last I saw them was in Maplins in the UK].

If ninety percent of the 'neocons' were Palestinian, would Iraq have been invaded?

These people seem to think not:

12). Robert Zoellick-----U.S. Trade Representative, a cabinet-level position. He is also one of the more hawkish pro-Israel Jews in the Bush (Jr) Administration who advocated invading Iraq and occupying a portion of the country in order to set up setting up a Vichy-style puppet government. He consistently advocates bombing Iraq.

Yes, yes... I understand all that. Point is I rather doubt that LP is 'hiding' in the sideband of Voice of Russia.

Yes, you are right. It doesn't need to hide anywhere as it doesn't exist ;-)
I just thought it was interesting to show that those SWLers listening to old Joe probably were not aware that a spy TX was "hiding" in its skirts.

Actually mike they did have a lot to do with the violence and terrorism in the world. The problem is, I believe it that and you don't and we will never agree on this topic so lets have a beer and stop beating a dead horse. Ok.

New batteries solve a lot of problems,now don't they? I have an attatchment that attatches to a hand held propane tank and there is copper tip (or whatever it is made of) that fits inside the attatchment for soldering.I like to collect old things and I own quite a few old electric soldering guns and non electric soldering irons.I don't want one of those As Seen On Tv soldering guns though.

I think this was kind of a special case. It was on Boxing Day, and the broadcaster that I'd expect to be the best to cover it, Radio Australia, seemed to be completely shut down for the holidays. Even now they're on a half-assed schedule.

Keep listening. I've heard, live, the second plane hit on 9/11 and the Tienamen Square Massacre had some hair curling coverage.

Try for Canadian Coast Guard, the North Atlantic can be a pretty rough place.

Because there are two tuned circuits, each using a segment of the main capacitor gang, (the input transformer, and the output of the amplifier).  Both are feeding the gates of FET amplifiers, so are (or have the possiblity of being) high impedance and therefore high Q.

The fact that there's an "antenna trim" control, (which really usually compensates for mistracking of the two tuned circuits) indicates that they're pretty sharp, at least for an LC tuned circuit.  Likewise, the bandspread capacitor is two sections, one in parallel with the main oscillator tuning, the other in parallel with the RF amp output tuning cap.  So the Q must make the bandwidth narrower than the 1/2 MHz or so that, (as I remember), the bandspread covers.

Hmmm. This may or may not be related, but I did hear a very short exchange about a rescue operation this morning on 8983 khz, which is a Coast Guard frequency. I haven't heard anything else, though (and would have posted it here, if I had).

Commercial Radio Australia is spearheading a mission to restore broadcast operations in tsunami-hit countries, contributing some 50,000 AM/FM radio sets to affected areas.

This initiative, which is being coordinated by the ABU, calls for the donation of radio sets and broadcasting equipment to survivors and broadcasters affected by the disaster, which has claimed almost 150,000 lives and left millions homeless.

Joan Warner, CRA's chief executive officer, said the first batch of 5,000 radio sets would be shipped to Indonesia in a week's time, with the rest to be despatched to affected areas over the next four to five weeks.

"We also have up to six transmitters that we can donate," she said.
Ms Warner also said CRA would send at least 12 engineers to rebuild broadcasting facilities in disaster zones. The engineers will be sent in groups of four for a few weeks at a time.

CRA is an industry body representing Australia's commercial radio broadcasters.

France's Eutelsat SA, an ABU affiliate member, will allow free usage of its fixed satellite services (FSS) in affected areas.
A representative, Jan Grondrup-Vivanco, said this would enable Internet access and Voice over Internet Protocol telephony be set up in these places.
Meanwhile, Singapore's MediaCorp has promised to look into the needs of Radio Television Maldives (RTVM) which lost much of its equipment when the tsunami struck.

ABU appeal to aid disaster-hit broadcasters draws North American offers

Date: 07-January-2005
Offers of assistance to provide battery-operated radio sets and restore broadcast operations in countries hit by the December 26 earthquake and tsunami, in response to an appeal by the ABU, are coming from as far away as North America.

The owner of a network of radio stations in Canada's Yukon Territory is pledging broadcast equipment and expertise for affected broadcasters.
A representative of Burr and Burton Academy, a secondary school in Vermont, USA, has said its staff will begin collecting AM/FM radio sets for survivors of the disaster.

Meanwhile, a radio engineer from California, USA, said he is willing to travel to affected areas at his own expense in order to help build and maintain radio stations there.

Relief operations continue in Sri Lanka

Date: 07-January-2005

Sri Lankan Sinhala and Tamil TV and radio channels, Sirasa TV/FM and Shakthi TV/FM, launched Sirasa-Shakthi Sahana Yaathra on 28 December, to enable the public to aid victims of the tsunami disaster.

Sirasa-Shakthi Sahana Yaathra sent a convoy packed with relief items to affected areas in the south, north and east of Sri Lanka. Volunteer doctors, nurses, school children and foreigners also joined the effort.

Another operation began in Colombo on 30 December to provide medical assistance to survivors in southern and eastern Sri Lanka.

Sirasa TV/FM said contributions and support were continuing to pour in to the main collection centre in Colombo and other regional offices around the island.

Radio Netherlands to set up radio stations in Aceh

Date: 06-January-2005

Radio Netherlands is starting a programme to set up a number of emergency radio stations in Banda Aceh, capital of Indonesia's tsunami-hit Aceh province.

The station will appeal to its 6,000 partner stations around the world to collect money and equipment for the programme.

Radio Netherlands Media Network reported that the emergency radio stations will in due course be built up into permanent stations.

One of the stations that was destroyed by the tsunami on 26 December is Radio Nikoya FM, that used to broadcast news in Indonesian from Radio Netherlands on a daily basis.

The head of the Indonesian department of Radio Netherlands, Indra Titus, said: "We want to help to get the radio stations back on the air, because radio is a very important means of communication in the stricken areas.

"As help is beginning to flow, communications must be restored to help the search for family members and make information accessible. Even under normal circumstances, radio in Indonesia is a vital means of communication that people cannot be without."

34 staff of TVRI and RRI-Indonesia missing

Date: 04-January-2005

Indonesia's public broadcasters, Televisi Republik Indonesia and Radio Republik Indonesia, say 34 members of their staff are missing in Aceh province, devastated by the tsunami on 26 December.

A senior official of RRI said 24 staff were missing, while TVRI reported 10 staff missing and feared dead.

Aceh province was the area worst hit in Asia's tsunami disaster, with more than 90,000 people killed.

About 100 TVRI families lost their homes or were badly affected, and both TVRI and RRI reported severe damage to transmitters and other equipment.

About 2,000 people who lost their homes have taken refuge in a park in the TVRI complex in the provincial capital, Banda Aceh, where TVRI staff are helping care for them.

Meanwhile, India's public broadcaster, Doordarshan, has reported no casualties among its staff but severe damage to several TV transmitters on Car Nicobar, the northernmost of the Nicobar Islands in the Bay of Bengal. Twelve of the 15 villages on the island were reported to have been flattened.

SLRC-Sri Lanka mounts big relief operation

Date: 04-January-2005

Sri Lanka's public broadcaster, SLRC, has mounted a major relief operation for victims of the tsunami that struck the island on 26 December, killing more than 30,000 people.

After on-air appeals brought in big donations, SLRC sent more than 200 lorry loads of food, clothing and medicine to badly hit areas in the island's north, east and south in less than 72 hours. It also sent medical teams to many affected areas.

"A large number of volunteers from all walks of life worked round the clock with the staff of the SLRC to make this possible," its Director-General, Nishanta Ranatunga, said.

Among those who died was an SLRC member of staff who was among more than 1,000 people killed when the tsunami struck a train near the southern city of Galle.

An SLRC outside broadcast crew in the nearby town of Matara were luckier. Covering an unrelated story, they were trapped in their hotel when the tsunami struck but were later rescued and were able to cover the tragedy.

Miss Withers obviously was not qualified to write this article. Or perhaps she didn't know what she didn't know and this failed to ask the proper questions. When you read a sentence that says, "...members have built radio towers that help them pick up _clearer_ frequencies.," you know you're going in for a rough ride. And it's difficult to understand some of the stuff she's written. In one sentence, it's unclear whether she means to say that the ham radio hobby is passed down from generation to generation or that the radio gear itself goes from generation to generation. It might, in fact, be both but she's such a poor writer than you just can't tell what the heck she means. But I nonetheless appreciate the report on the challenges faced by this dying, indeed close-to-death hobby in its struggle to maintain some signs of life.

Cheers,

I called it propane-powered, but I meant to say Butane. Mine is the TechTorch by Ronson:
http://www.ronsoncorp.com/techtorch.cfm

It was just $20 or so at Walmart. The soldering iron tip has a small chunk of catalytic material in it. You light the torch, let it run for a few seconds, and then blow out the flame. The catalytic material continues to generate heat without a flame. It's great for all-around soldering, although I prefer a direct flame when soldering to ground rods and other heavy-duty jobs.

This may be of interest:

 ZAMBIA. 4500, ZNBC: I spoke with their Director of Engineering this morning. He says that they have just rehabilitated one of their two 100 kW transmitters and are testing it. Hence, the strong signals that we have been receiving (Hans Johnson, Cumbredx mailing list Jan 5 via Mike Terry, BDXC-UK via DXLD)

5th Jan they were already back on their normal 6165 kHz. Sign-on with fish eagle IS from 0245, from 0251 NA and 4910 divided to the other network. 73, (Mauno Ritola, Finland, ibid.)

I'm not sure whether they are using 4500 on a regular basis now or simply testing, but, the fish eagle interval signal is something to hear for sure.

I like Clint Eastwood. They filmed The Unforgiven here in Alberta. It could have been better, though.

John Wayne was quite the character. He had a lung taken out because of cancer and kept right on smoking. True Grit or Real Stupidity?

The outlet which has been recently reported to be from Bangui on 31 meters is thought to be either via Gabon or France itself per some recent reports.

Under these circumstances getting the 7600GR (and selling / giving the 7600D to someone who can fix it) seems like the better option. The 7600D was good in its day, but the current model is better in a number of aspects.

You need to aquire a better understanding of the English language. There is a difference between being 'armed to the gills' and actually having 'gills'.

Radio Netherlands weekends 19 to 21 hrs UTC
15315

I just listened to a news commentary by Robert Green on Radio Netherlands and concluded that he is a complete idiot. He complains that the huge response in of money to the tsunami destruction in Asia is due to western national guilt and not a response to the magnitude of the destruction and death to that event. He furthers this line of thoughtlessness by postulating that this act will be leveraged to offset any future contributions for aid to future disasters.

This is just another demonstration of the liberal mindset at work with its distortion of facts of an event, the motivations of entities in response to it and of course how everyone should behave instead.

Robert Green should forget broadcasting, go skiing with Kofi Annan instead, and let the world take care of itself.

David,

The reason you cannot argue with a "rightie" is because your supposed "arguments" are nothing but whining and name-calling.

For evidence of this, please re-read your own post.

Leonard,

The debate was whether NPR had a left-leaning antenna (which you thoughtfully acknowledge).

The "unfairness" (since you brought it up) is that NPR is taxpayer funded.
How would you feel if they taxed you to subsidize the "talk radio" you despise?

Regards,

Stinger

I read about it this morning at Drudge Report.I don't know much about Submarines but about seven years ago a guy who was a Submariner said on a late night radio talk show I was listening to said Submarines are never suppose to sit on the bottom.Something about sand and other things can get into the Submarine's water intake grills and foul things up.

Well the hell with you as it is all SW related so my comments are reinserted. Go start your own thread if you don't like it bozo. I don't care whether you agree with me or not but you are not clipping my comments. I have replied to their commentary before on their web site and they don't post it there so it goes here in a public SW forum they don't control. The days of information flowing one way are gone for good.

If you want to see some human garbage look in the mirror.

Oh yeah and you are a real Trolling jackass for setting the follow up to another news group. Everyone should put you in their kill file.

I just listened to a news commentary by Robert Green on Radio Netherlands and concluded that he is a complete idiot. He complains that the huge response in of money to the tsunami destruction in Asia is due to western national guilt and not a response to the magnitude of the destruction and death to that event. He furthers this line of thoughtlessness by postulating that this act will be leveraged to offset any future contributions for aid to future disasters.

This is just another demonstration of the liberal mindset at work with its distortion of facts of an event, the motivations of entities in response to it and of course how everyone should behave instead.

Robert Green should forget broadcasting, go skiing with Kofi Annan instead, and let the world take care of itself.

A Sony 7600gr or a Sangean ATS-909 are both MUCH more radio than a Yacht Boy 400, which -- even when new -- is not in the same league as the other two radios (as far as clarity of sound) because of the "buzz" or "hum" that many of them exhibit.

That wasn't my point. My point was that conservatives are always telling liberals here to stay on topic, to post things shortwave related, and calling them tards if they don't. But when the conservatives stray off topic, the other conservatives justify it with comments like yours or declare it shortwave related. The original post was just about as shortwave related as my post about a BBC report on Iraq. In fact, mine was MORE shortwave related, since it had little of my own commentary and was mostly an account of an actual report on the BBC about an interview they did with an Iraqi who just happened to have some very nasty things to say about Americans. The post that started this thread briefly mentioned a RN commentary (not an actual news report but the station management's OPINION) and then used this opinion to justify his own opinion about liberals. But this gets lauded by the conservatives while the liberals get called tards. Can you say "double standard"?

I don't know; I haven't been here that long. Al basically believes everything the kooks on domestic US SW say; he's a great way to see what the kooks are talking about without actually having to listen. He particularly follows Pete Peters closely.

Hello Ron,

I am not advocating the Wellbrook ALA 330S as a medium wave antenna; many people on this and other sites have questioned whether it is usable on the MWs. PASSPORT and some other references have said that the '330S is quite "dead" on the medium waves. At least at night, this is not so. If someone is interested in this antenna, at least they should know that, though it certainly is not a first choice, it is adequate for some MW listening, at least in my experience. (As I have stated here and other places, I do not often DX on the MWs.)

Other people, such as yourself, who do MW DX, are more qualified than I am to comment on the '330S's relative MW performance.

I must mention, however, that I could not hear the Ukrainian station on my Grundig Satellit 800 with the C. Crane (Justice) AM antenna; too much local noise.

But I did hear it clearly on my AOR AR7030 Plus with the Wellbrook Loop when the Newark, NJ station faded out.

Best,

Joe

No! No! No! We love to discuss politics. Just have your liberal facts together. That's an oxymoronic statement, isn't it? Hum? Never mind, it wont work. Lets just keep arguing. ;)

No! But we do know where the truth lies.

And the liberals are indeed 'tards. Just witness what happened earlier this week in the hallowed halls of Congress.

It's getting close to clean up time, very close.

You should see the class schedules of football and basketball scholarship players. It's nothing but PE and some "jock classes" (classes that are even more dumbed down than the norm, although I find it hard to see how that's possible). Most athletes spend their college careers simply playing their sport, both on campus and traveling around to different schools to play. When they're not playing they're training to play and doing college credit courses like weight training. (That doesn't include extracurricular activities like drinking, partying, and sex.) I'm not surprised to find out that a student can go through her entire college career simply twirling a baton and taking jock classes. I don't know what she expects to do for a job once she gets out. At least there's pro leagues for football and basketball players.

I've committed myself to the "400" Grundig. It's intended use will be as an on-the-go radio. That being said, it should suffice. The sync feature is a big plus for the Sony. Darren

The US is starting to look more and more fascist by the day. My guess is that the government will have total control over what gets broadcast, and will allow only a) that which is profitable or b) that which toes the government's party line. The trend is towards a handful (4-5) big cable companies and 2 satellite companies. That means that all broadcasting in the US will be controlled by a handful of huge corporations-tied to the Republican Party and George W. Bush and his friends, of course. Then they will cover the country with BPL in order to totally wipe out all shortwave reception, because they know that SW can go places other media can't. With shortwave unusable and domestic media totally under the thumb of the government, the American public will be helpless to turn back the tide of neoconservative dominance. America will be a parallel universe where everybody believes that the economy is going straight up, that we are winning in Iraq, that George W. Bush is a genius comparable to Albert Einstein. And with all outside sources of information cut off, they will have no choice but to believe it, because they will have no other opinions except the approved opinion. It will be like Orwell's 1984 where the telescreen insisted that the world was just humming along wonderfully when in fact everything was breaking down and barely functioning. We'll need to find a way to null BPL so that we can still listen to real news. I wonder if the anti-jamming antenna on Radio Free Asia's website is effective against BPL?

Sounds like propaganda time!   Didn't we drop a lot of radios on the Iraqi people so we could give them instructions and tell them how wonderful we were while dropping bombs on them to keep their evil dictator from dropping bombs on them?  ;-)  The more things change the more they stay the same!

That would be Eaton's (eh) as in the Timothy Eaton Company (eh)
Later known at the T. Eaton Company, then simply known as Eaton's, then later bought out by The Hudson's Bay Trading Company, which is now known as "The Bay"  - so ends the Canadian retail history lesson.

On to the radio: Eton is the resurrected Grundig.

(Beauty eh, like Grundig makes great radios, not for hosers...)

I just tuned into the BBC (it's just after 0300 UTC as I write this) and both 5975 and 9525 are covered up by that noise again. The one that sounds like it's flourescent light QRM. The one that suddenly appeared just after Christmas, then disappeared just after New Years, but now is back. Whoever is doing this is quite close, RF wise, to my Northern California location; I hear the noise even when I have the radio in a position that is usually a "dead spot". It totally wipes out the BBC's signal. I'm SURE this isn't a mixing product or front end overloading; it doesn't appear on the stations on either side of the BBC's channel. Is anybody else hearing this? I know that Arnie and Mark Zenier heard it last time, so I'm not going crazy. Tune in to the BBC on 5975 and 9525 around 0300, just to see if you hear it. I'd like to know if more easterly DXers like Ace can hear this and what they make of it.

What is the administration going to do, give conservatives a "liberal hunting license" and allow you to hunt down and kill liberal tards like Rambo? Didn't Hitler wipe out the opposition so that nobody would be around to question where he was leading the country?

So if a liberal questions a conservative its freedom of speech. And if a conservative questions a liberal it a form of Nazism?

Give me a break dork!

I also now have the ALA 330S. It is impressive. I'm sure the 1530 is better on MW, but the 330S isn't bad. Like Joe, there's little I want to listen to on MW anyway.

Don't you fellows forget that "The Doctrine of Balaam" comes about as much from The Antiquities of the Jews, by Flavius Josephus, a Jew, as it does from the Bible. ;-)

NO, you misundestand. She proably won a scholarship to ANY school by winning a competition. It probably doesn't require her to study twiling. The scholarship was a prize.
For all we know, she's studying math or physics. Or cooking.

Hell, there's a scholarship for Ukrainian-Americans, and it doesn't require them to study Ukrainian law or history.

LOL, do you really think anyone really cares about this stuff??

The vast majority of us in this group want to talk about SW RADIO, not about your jew hatin propaganda spouting whackaloon preachers, and the shit they blow out their asses. At best, they are good for a chuckle, but the worst part is people like you believe their nonsense. Since it fits your jew hating agenda, you swallow it, and think it tastes great.

Most people have other ideas..

LOL, out in Las Vegas 25 years ago, a few of the star basketballers not only didn't go to class, and yet passed them, they didn't work at their "job" that paid 3.75/Hr, and "mysteriously" somehow drove new Corvettes and Trans-Ams.

Well they did until the whole scam exploded. A couple of them could barely read when tested. What a shock!

Didn't hear them on at all this evening.
Propagation has been horrible with a near s-6 noise floor. HF 90% useless this evening, even the Florida boys on 3.945 who are usually 20-30 over s-9 were barely moving the s-meter. AM Broadcast is strange also! Hearing Cuba and Mexico AM BCB as strong as WWL and WWVA.

My overly elaborate antenna farm was constructed a bit at a time entirely to hear Imus from this or that distant affiliate (5:30-10am) so is MW oriented, and concerned with daytime performance mostly, though getting rid of Cubans and a couple ``locals'' on 660 conveniently in opposite directions N and S competing with WFAN in NYC was a nighttime problem too.

At night, there's no real question of MW performance except for nulling stuff away, which can be very difficult except at the low end of the band because direction of arrival varies by more than the size of a deep null (nulls are bigger at the low end).

So anyway it has a couple ALA 1530's in the array, which null N-S unless the wind has blown them around.  They're not as sensitive as the Dymek McKay DA100E whips but do have that convenient null built in, and at night the sensitivity simply doesn't matter much. All signals are strong then.

As you know I am a program listener. I'm interested various program material (read culture) across the globe. Like many I like to hear other countries take on current events but like any sane human being it has to be intelligent commentary, which is not necessarily defined by how I happen to think.

I generally like Green's self effacing humor but there was none this time around. In its stead was just an ignorant opinion and that was not enough so he had to extrapolate his tongue-lashing to what we will do next. You would have thought after the idiot at the UN made the stingy comment about the US earlier this week Green would have thought better than going with another knock at nations trying to do good in a time of need. Essentially it looks to me that people in the UN and people like Green use the misfortune of others to play their favorite brand of politicks. This sort of thing makes me ill.

The remark I made about skiing was that Kofi was skiing in Colorado at the time of the disaster. Because Kofi was off on vacation another UN idiot made the stingy comments shortly after the disaster and while the US was actually delivering aid.

Id say the better way to go as far as a "value for dollar" solution is to get the new 7600gr.  I have a 7600gr and I absolutely love it.  The ssb selectable am sync makes it my favorite of all my portables for program listening.  The audio quality is good, the sensitivity is very good an the selectivity is very good.  I also like it a lit for medium wave listening. The 7600gr with all its features is a nice step up from the 7600d that you have.   If you spend money to have an older radio fixed, you'll still have a radio with a lot of miles on it and far less features and capabilities of the 7600gr.

Keeping this ON TOPIC:  I heard a shortwave minister mention the doctrine of Balaam in connection with the works of Flavius Josephus. I'll make that one or more separate posts.

The Antiquities of the Jews was written by a Jewish historian named Flavius Josephus.  It is NOT considered to be inspired by God but does fill in some of the blanks left by the Bible.  Yes, The Bible has blanks in it.  The Gospel according to  Saint John, KJV, tells us in chapter 21, verse 25 that, "...there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen."  They didn't have computers, file compression software, and/or microfiche in those days.  :-)  They didn't even have printing presses.  All books were written out by hand -- one copy at the time!

Too many doctrines are founded upon one or two scriptures which are taken out of context.  It has been said that the Bible itself is its own best commentary.  Therefore, doctrines must be examined in the light of the entire Bible.  One may then use historical texts to fill in some of the gaps which seem to be present in the scriptures.

OK.  OK.  I'm getting to the point!  :-)   The Antiquities of the Jews, being hundreds of years old has gone into the public domain and can be legally downloaded off the net from various sites.  I'll not try to direct you to any one site.  Just use Google, or any other search engine, and look for "Antiquities of the Jews" and download a copy or use it online.  I prefer downloading a copy so I can search it without tying up the phone line.  It contains some very interesting information.  There is at least one copy which is a zip file and becomes an exe file when opened.  While it is good for doing the searching, etc., the gentleman implants his own contact information in the program AND PROHIBITS / DISABLES YOUR ABILITY TO DO A CUT AND PASTE from within the built in browser, by not allowing you to do a copy of marked or highlighted information.  Yes, it presents the information in HTML format.  While you may want to download, and use, this program you'll also want to do a cut and paste from time to time so I'd recommend also getting it from a site that just lets you download the html, text, or doc version of it.

I DO NOT imply that there's not some leaven of the pharisees contained therein, but it also supports the scriptures in a number of places. Jesus warned His disciples in Luke 12:1, KJV, "... Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy."

I'll refer to the Antiquities of the Jews in another post or two, but I'll make them separate posts.  Any who wish to know some of the secular history of the days of Christ will appreciate the works of Flavius Josephus.

It's interesting to note that Primetime Shortwave gives the frequencies for N. Korea at 1300 utc as follows:

1300-1400     NA, Eu   North Korea   V. of Korea   4405, 9325, 11710, 13760, 15245

While the schedule available at http://www.eibi.de.vu/ provides the following frequencies:

1300 1400       KRE Voice of Korea          E   Eu  4405 7570 12015
NAm 9335 11710
1300 1400       KRE Voice of Korea-PBS      K   Eu  6285 9325

Some slight discrepancies between the two, but big enough to throw someone off. If (as eibi indicates) 9325 is used for a Korean broadcast to Europe, that would explain what I heard this morning. On the other hand, Primetime Shortwave doesn't even mention 9335, which appears to be an active frequency for English language broadcasts from N. Korea. I wonder if incomplete or inaccurate data on Primetime Shortwave at least partially accounts for my failure to receive N. Korea.

I think you'd should either recheck, or update your info.

I guess you'd better try then for the 9335 and 11710 which are indicated on EiBi for English to N. America at 1300.

That would make sense to me.

As I've stated, time and time again, they are audible here on an almost daily basis when I've taken the time to check for them.

I try to be as helpful as I possibly can, however if no one wishes to listen, it's not my fault!

Interesting how when the conservatives in this NG (followups reset to correct group) post commentary, it's OK, but when liberals do it, it's "tardism". The BBC is liberal trash for reporting the rotten underside of the Iraq war, but Pete Peters and other far right wing SW Konspiracy Kookz speak the gospel truth. Neocons are the biggest hypocrites in the world, proclaiming love for the Constitution and the rights of people everywhere to freedom while trashing the Constitution at home and installing a puppet govt in Iraq to enable them to steal its oil. Liberal "tards" may be a little strange, but neocons are downright poisonous.

Uhhhhh... the only fools who are intent upon trashing the Constitution at home are 'tard Liberals... that's a fact.

If one does a search of the King James Bible for the word Balaam he'll get about fifty nine instances of the use of the word.  A vast majority of those instances will be found in three chapters of the Old Testament, Numbers 22-24.  This portion of the Christian Bible also happens to be a part of the Pentateuch (first five books of the Bible) and is accepted by some Jews.  It is also part of the Jewish Torah.  Therefore, Christians and Jews should be familiar with this subject.

In Numbers 22-24 we learn that the Moabites feared the Children of Israel and attempted to HIRE Balaam, a prophet of God, to CURSE the COI Children of Israel.  (Remember the Patriarchs?  The fathers who ruled their families. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are perhaps the best known of the patriarchs; but Jacob's twelve sons were also patriarchs.  So where does the name "Children of Israel" come in?  In Genesis 32:28, Jacob's name was changed to Israel!  Therefore, he is sometimes referred to as Jacob/Israel and therefrom comes the phrase "Children of Israel" instead of "Children of Jacob".  So any time you hear the term Children of Israel you are hearing about the descendants of the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac and Jacob/Israel.

People often FEAR the things they don't understand.  People often CURSE the things they fear.  They also FEAR some of the things they DO understand.

Balak sought to BRIBE Balaam into CURSING the children of Israel, about 1,000,000 plus strong.  These are the same people who went down to Egypt as about 70 people, the kin of Joseph, who was sold into Egypt as a SLAVE.  The scriptures tell us, in Numbers 22:15-18, "And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they. And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me: For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people. And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more."

Notice.  This king Balak promised the man of God, Balaam, very great honor and whatever he wanted to CURSE these children of Israel.  Balaam, told him if he gave him a KING'S HOUSE, a PALACE, FULL OF SILVER AND GOLD, he could only do as God commanded.  It really appears that Balaam didn't want to curse them.  He even turned an attempted curse into a blessing.  However, Balaam REALLY WANTED those riches that Balak promised him.  The scriptures seem to imply here that Balaam went home and did not curse God's people (Num. 24:25).  HOWEVER, Balaam DID, through Balak, curse the children of Israel and, we read in Joshua 13:22, they killed him.

I don't want to minimize the FACT that God turned the curse into a blessing. This is mentioned more than once in the Scriptures. However, Balaam is also mentioned in connection with the "wages of unrighteousness" (2 Peter 2:15), the "error of Balaam" - Jude 1:11 and the "doctrine of Balaam" in Revelation 2:14.

Rev. 2:14, KJV, "But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication."

Notice that Balaam cursed the Children of Israel, temporarily, by TEACHING BALAK to cast a stumbling block before them by getting them to eat things sacrificed to idols and to commit fornication.

This is were the "Doctrine of Balaam" comes in and also were the Antiquities of the Jews by Flavius Josephus comes in. Josephus tells us HOW Balaam instructed Balak to curse the children of Israel. This seems to be supported and reinforced by the references in Second Peter, Jude and Revelation.

I'll give you a hint, a clue, a tip to save you some time. The Works of Josephus is a pretty big read for one sitting. Go to Antiquities of the Jews, Book IV, Chapter 6. He goes into great detail on how to seduce the children of Israel.

POINT: Do you ever wonder WHY the media, supported by the courts in the name of free speech, promotes so much ludeness and vulgarity? I'll give you a hint. "The Doctrine of Balaam !"

This ballad about the Indian Ocean http://rhhardin.home.mindspring.com/aus2.ram was played at 23:30 UTC Jan 8 21740 kHz

The ID sounds like (to me) ``Barnett Carney with a song called Marsingles Baily'' but google suggests nothing for it.  ID at the end.

Maybe somebody with a browser that can navigate the RA website can find a play list?   Mine pulls up blank pages for everything.

That's absurd.  Hate radio is paid for by advertisers who take tax deductions on the advertising expense, then jack up the price of their products to cover the advertising.  The great unwashed pay twice.

I didn't hear this commentary, and this is not exactly on your topic, but RA had a guy who commented that alot of countries make aid agencies buy supplies in the home country with the monies they collect, and that alot of aid does not leave the donor country.  It was hard to get a sense of what countries that was.  I think it is very important to do some good research before donating to make sure the funds are actually going to the right places and not remaining in the pockets of the agency collecting it.

There other comment was about suspending interest and debt payments (? 4 billion for Indonesia - not sure I got this right, and I don't know if AUS $ or other).

Re your topic, there are always the pundits who are prepared to make dumb comments about anything.  BTW I'm betting neither Killer Kofi or the silly announcer can ski.  Kofi Annan lost all credibility when he failed to back up General Deliaire in Rwanda and let a million+ people get massacred by not sending in reinforcements for the UN soldiers there in 1993. Delaire's book "Shake Hands with the Devil" tells the story in complete and disturbing detail.  Unbelievable that Annan is running the UN. Unbelievable he's running anything at all.

That's quite a deal at 100 dollars for the YB400 at Heartland. And that includes the adaptor too. For small portables, you can't go wrong with either radio (7600GR or the YB400). The 400 has great audio for its size. Let us know how you like the 400 once you had a chance to play with it.

No cover up.  It was reported as soon as it was suspected.  All cows from the farm where the suspected cow was born were quarantained.  They tracked all cows who's gone elsewhere.  They did several (3, I think) of the "quick" tests, and all were inconclusive until the last one came in on 06 Jan, and confirmed BSE.  The system is working exactly as set up: early detection, early alerts and full public disclosure.  BTW, the system is coordinated fully with the USA and the response and standards are identical.  As they should be.

The cows on the infected farm are all destroyed and all will be tested, so will cows who have left that farm and the secondary farms also.

Here I sit at 01:00UTC wondering what other stations I should be able to get now that WBCQ is finally unreadable. I am figuring someone out there has a group of stations they listen to on a Saturday night, what are they?

Thanks!

A girl from Lethbridge Alberta is on a baton twirling scholorship at some US university and is going to perform at US pres Bush's second swearing in ceremony.

What in the blazes is a baton twirling scholarship?  This has to be a joke. People get university degrees in this??  There must be scholarships in card playing and channel surfing at this rate.  Maybe I'll apply for the one in listening to the radio.

WBCQ is still blasting in here at 30 over 9 on 7415... but that doesn't necessarrily mean it will stay that way!

Do I actually listen to them a lot? No, but I was simply checking the frequency.

Hi ShortwaveMan,

Sorry for the delayed reply; I don't go on the internet everyday. The loop is made of aluminum and is about 3-feet in diameter. The antenna interface and power supply is located somewhere conveniently near your receiver. You can see pictures of the unit on the website.

The antenna does not feature exceptional gain; that is not its design goal. What it DOES do (and EXTREMELY well) is to lower atmospheric and local electrical noise relative to the signal. In other words, this antenna greatly augments the signal-to-noise ratio of the short wave signal. If it is there, you will be able to hear it. If one is in an electrically quiet area, a long wire will do as well or better in the winter, though not necessarily in the summer.  However, in your circumstances, it may be your best choice.

Of course, we have to be practical in today's world and there is no denying that it is a costly piece of equipment (though you only have to buy it once; you will probably change radios many times if you stay in this hobby long enough).

Check it out. (That costs you nothing!)

Best,

Joe

Don't know what kind of antenna you have, but I'm listening to the UFO net on 3,977,7...lsb. Sometimes they discuss astronomy, and right now they're talking about that visible comet in the Pleides this month. (I can't remember the name of the comet right now). 80 meters seems pretty strong this evening.

Hello Leonard,

I hope you have read some of my previous posts so that you know about the terrible reception conditions and the local "covenant restrictions" of my townhome association which precludes outdoor antennas.

That said, I have tried many, many antennas here over the years: "long" wires (coiled and straight) in my listening room and my attic with and without MFJ-1020, MFJ-1020B antenna tuners and a number of other "homebrew" and purchased types.

I tried the Sony AN-LP1 Active Loop Antenna which, though it works well with my Sony ICF-SW7600G and 'GR models, does not provide satisfactory performance with my Grundig Satellit 800 or my AOR AR7030 Plus.

I major step up is the AOR WL500 Window Loop Antenna. This antenna provides better gain that the Sony and greatly lowers the noise level on many short wave signals. Still, while it is quite good for the "powerhouse" stations (and even for some DXing), it is not a "great" antenna in my location, though, when I purchased it, it was a major step up in my reception.

Having seen the improvement the AOR WL500 antenna made, I figured that the Wellbrook should be even better.

The Wellbrook ALA 330S Active Loop Antenna is a "great" antenna. Check it out for yourself on the Wellbrook website (quoted above) and look on the web (and on this group) for others' impressions.

It has greatly improved my ability to DX (both on SW and, though I do not do it often nor is it supposedly designed to do so, on MW).

It is of course difficult to justify spending $400+ on something based just on my enthusiastic recommendation. I bought mine because I was desperate and had been reading the good reviews the antenna had gotten in PASSPORT (see reviews in 2003, 2004, and now 2005) and WRTH (see its 2005 edition).

I can only tell you that, in my location, where I have EXTREME (take it from me on that account) local electrical noise and limitations on the antennas I can use, it has totally revolutionized my short wave listening experience.

Best,

Joe

>Well, I hope free TV continues in the future!

Well, it is a rare concept: Broadcasting you don't pay for!

Let's see if it survives.

Likely it won't. The FCC is pushing for digital TV and radio, and will require broadcasters to shut down their analog (free) channels soon.
What it means, is that with digital signals they can start ADDRESSING their siganls. No pay-no TV. And that means big brother will know what you're watching because they know what you're paying for.

But take it a step further. You're a Democrat or a liberal, or an arch-conservative, you may be BLOCKED from watching certain shows, or even worse, the content is EDITED to suit your particular tastes. Of course, they can also manipulate you.

Pretty scary huh?

Why do you think the government is funding PBS/CPB/NPR?  Wait until they need to control content. It'll be interesting.

In a really weird way, ANALOG IS FREEDOM!

Close, but not quite right....

When the conservatives post, it's generally a well-thought and coherent argument, based on actual facts.

When the liberals post, it's almost always a shallow, ill-thought-out, or completely false premise (usually ignoring logic altogether), or just name-calling....In other words -- "tardism."

WIGG,
I have the Sony ICF-SW7600GR and like the Radio very much as my on-the-go Travel Radio.
Stand-a-lone the Sony ICF-SW7600GR is a very good AM/FM Shortwave Radio and at it's "Price Point" with the AM SycnDet it is a 'Best Buy'.
TIP - I use the Sony ICF-SW7600GR with the Sony AN-LP1 'portable' Shortwave Antenna and together they both perform super.
FWIW - Found a medium size cosmetic bag that allows the Sony ICF-SW7600GR and its AC Adapter and Accessories to be placed in the right side compartment; and the Sony AN-LP1 Shortwave Antenna to be folded-up an placed in the left side compartment.
The whole thing Folds-Up and Zips together and the Radio and Antenna are protected and Ready-to-Pick-Up-and-Go.

Hello Gary,

May I suggest that you purchase a new Sony ICF-SW7600GR receiver which you can purchase very inexpensively - $130 or less.

For the moment, keep your 7600D.

I believe you will find the '7600GR to be a superior receiver than the 'D model (if only for the synchronous selectable sideband circuitry).

That said, if you really like the 'D model, and it has some sentimental value to you, later, when you are feeling "flush," you can then look to having it fixed or restored. It doesn't hurt to have more than one short wave radio! (I still have my old Lafayette HE-10 radio and I still use it occasionally.)

Remember, though, that these portable receivers are not really designed to be repaired. I'm told that at best you'll get 10 to 20 years of regular use of a portable radio and then it is ready for the "scrap pile." (I have had some portables which didn't even last 5 years! My two Sony ICF-SW7600G models are 7 and 5 years old respectively and they still work perfectly. My three 'GR models are 4 and 3 years old. I figure that it I use them "lightly" [due to having so many none gets used "heavily"] they will last for many, many years. Am I right? Ask me in twenty years, assuming I'm still around then!)

Best of luck,

Joe

good post Joe. I'm with Joe on this loop. i'm also no expert on this subject. but, i ordered my wellbrook loop the first of dec. 04, and it should be here the end of jan. i'm also sold on loops. i use the torus/Ed loop here on the portable's i like to play with. i've not tried it on my desktops. i will suggest a good reference book- Joe Carr's "Loop antenna handbook". produced and printed by universal radio research, (www.DXing.com). lot of good info in there. and, RHF can tell you about loops also. he advocates the yahoo groups, which i also read a few times a week.
lot of info with a google search too. i remember a post here on the "pizza box loop", last year i believe. easy projects and fun.
the first i tried a loop, and found the null, i was hooked. try a cheapie home brew. you may be surprised. i was.. good DX...

It makes sense to me that you are having your best success with a small amplified loop antenna due to your receiving situation, which is electrically noisy and where erecting a full size wire antenna would be a problem.

This antenna design is a good one for medium wave or BCB. Local electrical noise generally goes up the lower in frequency you try to receive on. The allowed electrical compliance curves for most items increases at lower frequencies. The small loop is sensitive to magnetic fields where the locally generated noise tends to be electric fields. This insensitivity to local voltage noise fields will result in better signal to noise than a voltage field sensitive antenna.

As long as the loop amplifier response is flat down to 100KHz then the antenna should work just fine for BCB.

They are currently audible here with programming in Korean (KCBS) on 9335 at 1240. English should start at 1300 on 9335 and also 11710, both directed to North America.

Yep, I hear them on 9335. From now on I'm using Eibi rather than Primetime Shortwave...thanks for pointing me in the right direction.

That one could hide numbers in LSB -- geez

How would a "sophisticated code breaking and powerhouse computer" be any use at digging out a station in a LSB? I did it with my Sony 2001D.

Don't need no smart 'puters!

FWIW - The smaller TV type Binocular (Two Hole) Ferrite Cores will work OK. They can be build if you use small enough Magnet Wire. However, If you live in an area that has frequent Thunder and Lightening Storms and you have a 50 Foot or more long Wire Antenna Element. You may find that your Balun burns out very easily due to near by T&L Strikes.

FERRITE CORES :
Here are two Ferrite Cores that can be used to build your own Matching Transformer.

Given that the ferrite in a VHF and/or UHF television balun is most probably designed for those higher frequencies, even better results would most likely result if you had a ferrite core better suited for the SW bands.

Having moved house, my HF-150 remained packed in storage for two years. I have just retrieved. It is as deaf as the proverbial post. However, I have established that the whip antenna circuit works perfectly. Both other antenna systems function intermittently. It suggests a severed connection somewhere. I have the original manual and can access the circuit diagram. First, am I correct in assuming that I should focus my attention exclusively on the antenna conections to the RF side of the board. Second, if anyone out there is familiar with the circuitry could I be directed as to where I might really focus my inspections. If all else fails, is anyone out there repairing these excellent radios?

The sideband accessibility is little more than a novelty for me. I have a "base unit" here that provides that capability, but the conversations I've come across have done little to intrigue me. The Grundig's superior audio appeals to me. I'm not a "headphone" guy. Darren

For One and All,
Here is "Why" I am 'skeptical' about Digital Radio Mondiale (DRM) and In-Band On-Channel (IBOC); and will continue to buy a a few more radios in the next Ten Years (10 Yrs) that simply offer normal 'analog' AM/MW, FM and Shortwave Broadcasts.

DRM - Digital Radio Mondiale (DRM)
DRM => http://www.drm.org/
Digital Radio Mondiale (DRM) Broadcast Schedule {Links}
WWDXC => http://www.wwdxc.de/drm.htm
DRM => http://www.drm.org/livebroadcast/globlivebroadcast.htm
Experimenting with DRM - {FineWare SWL}
DRM SWL => http://www.fineware-swl.com/drm.html
IBOC - In-Band On-Channel (IBOC) AM and FM Digital Audio Broadcasting is designed for use in the USofA (Only).
IBOC => http://www.ibiquity.com/technology/iboc.htm
IBOC => http://www.ibiquity.com/technology/hdradio_how.htm
RW => http://www.rwonline.com/reference-room/iboc/index.shtml
"iBiquity Digital designed its IBOC technology to bring the benefits of digital audio broadcasting to today's Radio while preventing interference to the "host" analog Station and stations on adjacent channels."
For the most part TV is an Every Family (Household) and Every Family Member (Everybody) Broadcast Media Activity.
[ Everyone Watchs TV 3-5 Hours a Day Every Day ]
TV is "The" Mass Market Media in the USofA [.]
Contrast that to Shortwave Radio; where One Household in Ten in the USofA and 'only' One Member of that Household (One-in-Three) may be a Shortwave Listener (SWL) and 'want' DRM and IBOC.  This is a limited and specialized Consumer Market with small Profit potential.
Likw AM-Stereo this may be a Product the the Consumers
"Do Not Want" {Feel They Need}.
IN-THE-NEWS :
So here is the News Article that got me to start Thinking and Writing this post.  It is about the the near term future (2-4 Years) of Digital High Definition TV (HDTV) and related Technologies and Products.

The good news from this year's Consumer Electronics Show is that companies manufacturing the latest television models have finally learned to make some of these sets fit into ordinary budgets. - by Rob Pegoraro, The Washington Post
MY-POINTS - About High Definition {Digital} Television HDTV :

*  It's coming and will become the 'standard' for most American Households but not for the next few years.
*  The Commercial Forces behind it are Great because there is Big Money to be made selling the 'new' TVs.
*  The Consumer Demand is 'growing' and as TVs wear out more and more of the replacements will be HDTVs.
*  Since most 'analog' TVs still have a "Picture Tube";
I would expect that a TVs useful life would be 3-7 Years.
*  While our AM/FM Shortwave Radios being fully Solid State should have a useful life of 10-15 Years; barring a user caused 'accident'. (Or the Urge for a New Toy.)
so - what say you ~ RHF

Balaam's ass is the only animal in the bible capable of speech, other than the unfortunate incident involving Eve and the serpent.

The next known occurrence of a talking ass is Al Patrick.

Working, working, and working, actually, Brian.  The market's in great shape, and I've been making hay while the sun shines.

Speaking of fishing, I may be going over to Lake Minnetonka to try and hook some crappies this (Sunday) afternoon.  I think I'm going to use some crappie jigs on the ole ultralight (which I think I'm going to have to put new line on - does the work ever end?)

This line of thinking is a little more on target. To follow the "pipers" is to skip merrily over the cliff's edge. I'm not going to give anyone the bullets to shoot me with. If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Currently audible here again today on 9779.7 at 1630. Hopefully the signal will improve enough to determine if English is indeed at 1800.

I have a brand new Zippo lighter in the box in front of me right now.
It is still in the original Zippo box with the Red flame

I just brought it from the bedroom. My father must have bought it back in the 60's or 70's.

It has never been used. It has a picture of the U.S.S. Little Rock battleship on the side. then the words CLG-4

How many hundreds of thousands of dollars is this one worth? I'm ready to sell it for a fair price

I'm having an interesting moment now.

I'm sitting her at my computer listening to my YB 400 PE that is hooked up to the scanner antenna on the roof.

I'm listening to 15.190 the BBC. I have the direct lead from the antenna hooked to alligator clip and the other end hooked to the antenna of my YB 400 PE. The signal is weak, coming and going, and lots of noise. I have also plugged the antenna directly into the slot on the side of the YB 400 PE, but I still don't get a very clear signal on this frequency

I get up and go into my bedroom, turn on my 1972 Zenith Trans-Oceanic D-7000Y and tune the same frequency just using the whip. The signal is loud and clear. Very little fading, and almost no noise. Just a big booming clear signal.

That is really amazing to me that there could be so much difference between the two radios

So I think I'm going to get me a Satellit 800 and call it a day.
Forget about the receivers that cost thousands of dollars. I don't believe there would be that much difference anymore

What you have pointed out is one of the reasons IBOC is being pushed to begin with - they want to attract more listeners = more money.

In regards to SW DRM, I can only surmise that the "digital" may attract more listeners but the advertising dollars are not interested in an international audience.
Unless DRM is designed to create more local and regional listeners which the advertising industry may respond to.

If the industry can't attract more listeners then the MW & SW will remain on track to become the dinosaurs of broadcast media.  Whatever the final outcome may be - Long Live Analog!

USA Mad Cow Testing--A Deliberate Coverup?

USA Government Falls Short on Testing for Mad Cow--Is This A Coverup?

USDA Mad Cow Strategy: Don't Look, Don't Find

April 2, 2001 by Jeffrey A. Nelson vegsource.com

Compared to the actions taken by countries in the European Union, the United States government does not seem to be aggressive enough in protecting American consumers from bovine spongiform encelphalopathy (BSE), commonly known as mad cow disease.

The type of testing methods now used in the U.S. have been shown to miss prions detected by the more advanced testing methods employed in Europe. (A prion is a microscopic protein particle similar to a virus but lacking nucleic acid, thought to be the infectious agent responsible for BSE and certain other degenerative diseases of the nervous system.)

Germany, which long proclaimed itself "BSE-free" using the same type of testing the US currently utilizes, did not discover its first mad cow cases until it began using the more sensitive testing procedures.

The U.S. currently uses Western Blot analyses, immunohistory chemistry, and histopathology, which are more labor intensive and take longer than the newer tests. They require removing a portion of the brain, growing a culture, staining it with dye, and examining how the dye has interacted with the culture.

The U.S. also is presently testing only 1 out of every 18,000 cows slaughtered, whereas countries like Switzerland test 1 out of every 60 cows...

Dr. Marcus Doherr is a veterinarian epidemiologist at the University of Bern, Switzerland, who received his Ph.D. from University of California at Davis. He helped design the Swiss mad cow testing program, regarded by many experts as the most advanced in the world.

Doherr says that if the U.S. has as high an incidence of mad cow as France, for example, the current USDA testing program would not detect it. "They're not testing enough animals," he says. "The USDA argues it's a good sample, but it isn't representative of the population it is trying to extrapolate."

European countries have for some time been testing a far greater percentage of their cattle. And unlike the U.S., European countries are now testing animals which are headed into their food chain. The U.S. is currently testing a tiny number of "downer cows," cows which are selected for testing visually by USDA inspectors because of obvious illness.

Dr. Linda Detwiler, a veterinarian who chairs the BSE Working Group at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, defends current U.S. testing, asserting it is adequate to detect mad cow if it is in the U.S. "We are targeting fallen stock, and we know it's best to target those cows because in Switzerland, the country with the greatest scientific experience with spotting the disease, they found all their BSE cases in fallen stock, and none in testing animals going into the Swiss food chain."

Actually, that's not entirely correct. Dr. Markus Moser, a molecular biologist and guest researcher at Oxford University in England, heads the Swiss company Prionics, which developed a rapid-response test for BSE, called the Prionics Check Test. The Check Test costs about $40 per cow, and Moser says it has found cases of mad cow in tests of "healthy" cattle which otherwise would have entered the food chain.

Glad to see that it is them and not my equipment. I've had the same problem. I've haven't tried online for a few days though so maybe they are working again.

I listen to them on 9.580 here in the Middle Midwest most late nights until around sunrise. That would be from about 0700 UTC to about 1400. The signal is weak but understandable.

I get them here in the Midwest most every night from On Sun, 26 Dec 2004 14:42:34 GMT, "Burr" <pitz2@verizon.net> wrote:

Here's a photo of me decoding TASS RTTY with a Sony ICF 2001D and a Commodore 64 in 1988. The frequency shift was possible using the on screen display. The interface pc board had an on board CW filter.

Good old TASS RTTY! I had an M6000 decoder years ago and  monitored them via Cuba.

Back when there were still a few news services using SW.

It was after decoding Soviet ship to shore messages in RTTY that I saw that the Russians were not the evil people our leaders used to make out. They were very touching messages to granddad Oleg and little Misha.

I don't know about MW, but SW has been a dinoaur in Western countries for decades now...and I wouldn't have it any other way. That's precisely what's kept it interesting all these years.

I am a listener to the WS online...and I have been trying to nail down the times for the drama "Westway".

I am in NYC, so can someone tell me when it is on Eastern Time on the internet stream?

Thanks!

Level  S6-7 into WI (same earlier) but local Sat. afternoon hash is high.
Audio sounds like a Soviet era transmitter.  That female speaker has a very sweet voice.  Her voice cuts through well compared to the male speaker.

Thanks for the report!

The ONLY advantage the 400 has over the 7600 is the speaker and absolutely nothing else.  The relative audio quality of the 400 is overrated.  The audio difference compared to the 7600 is small.  These are portables after all.

I chuckle when people equate speaker frequency response to receiver quality.

>   Hmmm, a mistake, that's possible. I'm optimistic >though. Darren

I have both and the 7600 blows the 400/G4000 away in every other category.

Yeah, she does seem to have a bit more punch. Transmitter: whatever they are using would not appear to be of Soviet manufacture.

I agree!  Less flame-thrower interference also.
Maybe one day we will experience the bands as they were before the cold war and proliferation of high powered SW transmitters.

It's 18:40 z and I'm 'listening' (I think) to WWRB. There is some religious fervert doing his thing. At first I thought it was a pirate as the frequency seemed to be drifting up and down.

This guy is shouting so loud into the mic, that I came across his splatter as high as 20 khz and more above his broadcast frequency. In my recent SWL experience, I found that most AM signals could be detected at less than +/- 10 khz (usually 5) from the broadcast frequency. He's on 12.172 (I think). My meter seems to be resting on +30. His lower sideband is unclear, being interrupted by other powerhouse stations.

In the ILG database, WWRB's modulation is listed as DAB. What is this, and are SW broadcasters limited to 100% modulation as are (were?) amateur and commercial broadcasters? What is a reasonable bandwidth for an AM station.

Indulging "Le Donald" Endangers the Personal Security of Every American

Note: This January 9, 2005 BuzzFlash Editorial marks the ninth in 20 consecutive editorials BuzzFlash will be publishing through January 20th.

A BUZZFLASH EDITORIAL

Even though the nation was warned by GIs and whistleblowers that most Humvees were not properly armored prior to the Iraq war -- and that many soldiers did not have body armor, "Le Donald" held forth almost daily with a bizarrely idiotic display of doublespeak and sweeping hand gestures at Pentagon news conferences ensuring us that our troops were protected.

Rumsfeld and Cheney have been sidekicks since the Nixon Administration, and you can assume that he, Cheney, and the Pentagon Psy-Ops division is pretty much running the abysmal failure known as the war in Iraq.

Of course, Rumsfeld assured Congress that the army was in top shape and fully ready to meet the needs of overthrowing Saddam. The problem, of course -- almost 1500 GI deaths later, with thousands more wounded -- is that he was wrong.

Rumsfeld was a wrestler at Princeton, and he loves to dodge and weave, but he's a complete failure at pinning down his opponent, except when the grappler he is facing is himself. This guy, as Jon Stewart, has pointed out, appears to hold full blown press conferences with himself, where he asks and answers his own questions, without providing any real answers at all. In fact, his most famous rhetorical trick is asking himself a question before the media, and then answering it with more questions, which means he doesn't REALLY have any answers -- or none that make any sense to a resident of this planet.

His position basically appears to be: "I'm here. I'm Rumsfeld. I ain't going anywhere as long as Cheney's heart holds up. So F off."

Of course, when a soldier had the audacity to ask Rumsfeld why all the Humvees weren't armored, the Pentagon suddenly went into media blitzkrieg PR overtime showing how hard they were working to protect the Humvees and the soldiers. Uh, but the factory providing the armor said that the Pentagon had never asked it to increase its pace of production and that it wasn't working nearly to capacity.

Oh, that "Le Donald." He's such a kidder.

And what a thin skin that "Le Donald" has. Clearly, he must be aware of how he serves the American people, as the following example from the book "Sixteen Acres," illustrates. It concerns a dinner at the White House in 2004 in remembrance of September 11th, at which:

One fearless firefighter's widow found herself at a table with Rumsfeld, then very busy trying to get control of the nation that he had conquered the spring before. He asked her what she thought of the war with Iraq. "You don't want to know what I think of it," she answered, and when Rumsfeld said he did, she told him: "I resent that you are exploiting the death of my husband." The secretary of defense stormed off, leaving his wife behind to patch things up.

Maybe Rumsfeld has learned from that experience, but we highly doubt it. "Le Donald" is not into "personal growth." His office, however, claims that he has stopped having an automatic signature sign "personal" letters of "condolence" to the families of men and women soldiers killed in Iraq. Now, he'll have his secretary personally sign the letters for him, we guess.

What a guy, that "Le Donald" is.

If you know of anyone more incompetent, let us know.

Of course. We forgot. There's the rest of the Bush cabinet.

And Bush, of course.

With the Zenith is doing such a good job, why buy an 800?

I'm no expert, but why don't you try the YB400 with another antenna, even a portable wire like the Sangean ANT-60.

BBC 15190 is about the most reliable broadcast I can imagine, so unless your Grundig is dying I'd really suspect a big mis-match with the antenna.

Nope.  As soon as the HF users reach a certain level of decline, the FCC will auction-off the HF band for use in WI-FI local broadband networking, telling the hams to enjoy "2 meters and down."

Count on it.

I had to replace the antenna switch on my HF-150. I tried contact cleaners but that did not work for long. I ordered the switch from the "Lowe Workshop" a few years ago (hopefully it is still in business). Replacing it requires quite a bit of disassembly but it can be done with a good soldering gun, a set of allen wrenches and a lot of patience.

He said it's a scanner antenna. It's probably an antenna made for picking up VHF signals, which is likely why it's doing so poorly on HF.
He also said he clipped it onto the 400's whip using an alligator clip-another potential mismatch situation.

Hi

A few days ago someone posted a link to the auction for the Zenith Stratosphere.

The reserve was $50,000 and someone went for it.

You know, you're right. I've never seen "David" post any loggings, or anything remotely shortwave related. He always posts "OT" stuff he finds on the net. And it DOES provoke a response. I just happen to be liberal, and it seems I can't resist responding to the conservative responses to the liberal OT posts. Let's stop the vicious cycle by not responding to ANY of David's OT political posts. That means Ace shouldn't post his "go tote it, tard" response to these posts, because he and David always get in an insult fight that takes up bandwidth. If we just IGNORE all posts that are "OT" then we can get back to discussing shortwave. I've seen little discussion lately of such things as the BPL threat to HF.

But if you do this, then David and M II (and unfortunately myself and a few other liberals) will respond back to you and try to correct you. Then you try to correct us, and the vicious cycle continues. And David has once again successfully taken up bandwidth and disrupted the group.

I like to listen to shortwave to balance out the "opinion news" of corporate owned American media.

I see that the commercialization of college "amateur" sports is nothing new. I was watching the college football "bowl championship" games on New Years Day, and EVERY aspect of the broadcast was sponsored by some big corporation. "Dodge Defensive Playbook". "Ford Road Ahead to the Orange Bowl". (Ford America's current slogan is "Focused on the road ahead".) Even the first downs were sponsored by Citibank! Silly me, I thought this was amateur sports. Anyway, yes all of the college athletes are on the take, apparently the universities think that giving shitloads of money to athletes who can barely function otherwise is better than spending it on academics. Many American universities are an athletics program with an incidental academic schedule. Ever wonder why tuition is so high? I bet it all goes to the athletes and the coaches and the rest of the athletics department while professors make less in salary for an entire year than what it costs to attend for a quarter. Really sad.

I have one. I enjoy it very much. It is quite good on most shortwave and AM (MW) frequencies. Also very nice with FM and has good sound through the headphone output (in stereo). The whip seems to have good sensitivity as well. For the money I think it's great. It does not do so well on SSB, and has trouble with weaker signals, but if you will be doing primarily program listening, this is probably one of the best portables out there. Mine doesn't do so well indoors (it is excellent if used outdoors), but I live in a very RF-noisy apartment building...if you'll be using it inside, you might want to string up an outdoor antenna before hand, or looking into an active antenna of some kind.

When one considers that the bulk of the professors are probably liberal it all becomes so much less sad.

No that's Tom Betz, known as the talking ass of RRS. It's the only form

I agree 100 %.  I have a 7600gr and I have used the YB-400.  Other then the superior audio quality, the 7600gr is a much better radio in general.

Also.... I have a PL-550 that cost me brand new just under $50.00 plus shipping and I think the audio quality on the PL-550 is about as good as the YB-400.   The PL-550 also has way more features then the YB-400.

Same here. I used to get the news from mainland communist China, North Korea, Libya and Cuba among others. Needless to say I was speechless as to the difference between those broadcasts and the USA news media reporting.

If I want better sound I use ear buds. You get stereo on FM also with the 7600.

I owned an old Radio shack DX-380 portable for years and when it came time to buy another portable I went to the stores in the area and compared several. After that and reviewing specifications and features the ICF-SW7600G won hands down.

Try looking here:
http://www.rtty.com/rtty_list.htm
KAWN at  13528( 850Hz shift      75speed) was very active back in 2002. I tuned in jsut now 5:45EST and there is a strong FAX signal.
KWAN is located, I think, in Elk Creek Nebraska, so they should put a stong signal into your area.
The 7782 signal is strong at night.
My MFJ1278 is in strarage because receiving mil aero WX forcasts gets old.
There just isn't that much interesting, to me at least,
RTTY still on HF.

It's not easy to determine the bandwidth of a station by using a receiver. For instance, just because you can hear "something" from a station as you tune your receiver over a 20 kHz range doesn't mean the station is 20 kHz wide. You have to take the bandwidth and shape factor of your receiver's i.f. section into account. The strength of the signal will also affect what you observe.

For instance, a steady unmodulated carrier has essentially zero bandwidth. But if you tune across it in lsb or usb mode, you will hear the heterodyne over at least a few kHz. That's a funtion of your receiver, not the transmitted sugnal.

The correct way to characterize a station's bandwidth is with a spectrum analyzer.

The electric company has a maintenance number for you to call or you can probably to go a web site and report the outage. Go out side and see if there is a pole number. If you can't find a number then just give an address it is in front of and a description of the problem such as cycling on and off. They fix the street lights around here in one to two days usually.

Yep, and if it's a real problem the FCC requires them to get it fixed... my local power company spent over $5k this fall just to bring in a guy from Maryland to show the folks here how to find the problems I complain about!

Forgive my ignorance, but what is so special about this radio that would fetch such an obscenely high amount of money? I wonder if the bid is a joke. Good luck to the seller on collecting that.

Spectrum analyzers are generally expensive items. Got a source for a modern one that covers 1 to 30 MHz that does not cost a lot?

In addition to that the street light is a road safety issue that obligates either the city, country, power company or whomever owns it to get it repaired quickly. It will get fixed soon for legal reasons.

It looks like a really nice old radio that is rare. Not accounting for collectors of anything under those circumstances.

Zenith Stratosphere's are one of the most collectable radios, and they DO fetch extremely high prices. The one in question will no doubt fetch over $100,000 for the buyer once it's been completely restored. Radios like the innards) can go for as much as $5000. And that's a table radio.

Yes, I was just about to say the same thing. Once the cabinetry is repaired by a competent individual, and the electrical work is gone through it would certainly be worth much more.

Someone bidding that kind of cash knows what they are doing.

You think it'll get $100k Brenda, restored? Have there been any restored

Zenith only made 350 of those radios, and only about 40 are known to still exist.

The odd thing is the cabinet on this one has quite a few missing bits of veneer, and scratches, a knob is missing and the other knobs aren't in great shape.  The seller doesn't indicate if it works.

He may regret it after seeing the radio in person, but the high bidder bid at least $21k more than the next highest bidder to meet the reserve.

But this is somewhat of a "holy grail" radio - he might never see another one for sale.

Oh yes, if it has ANYTHING to do with a "corporation," then it's automatically bad, isn't it?

The main reason lefties don't like corporations is that they are a big part of the capitalist system, which is (of course) what they REALLY dislike.

And as far as media is concerned, of course those losers would LOVE to go back to the days of three major news outlets controlling all the news.  Back then, the only debate you'd hear was liberal Democrats debating moderate Democrats.

Would you like some government cheese with your whine?

It would have to be the U.N. that holds the auction as SW is not a "single country" phenomenon.
In which case you can expect it to be riddled with FRAUD!

This from a poster in rec.antiques.radio+phono:

The seller of the Zenith Stratosphere 1000Z just e-mailed me. Apparently the $50,000 bid was made in error according to the high bidder.  The 1000Z WILL BE RE-LISTED with a new reserve and "buy it now" feature.  The last legitimate bid was $28,700.

Yeah - my wife is the most supportive and loving person in the world to my hobbies, bless her. But if I suddenly told her I'd spent fifty G's on a 67 year old radio, my last sight would have been her standing over me reloading.

For the price, these are an excellent buy. They lack sync detection and, for me, the display is a little difficult to read unless it is held at just the right angle. Otherwise they have excellent audio, great FM stereo with earphones and the ability to receive SSB transmissions. They are very durable but tend to consume batteries at a rate a little above average.

Anything with the "SONY" label is very susceptible to being pilfered if you do much traveling. The YB400 is presently just a tad too funky to be a hot item on the black market.

I own a lot of portable SW radios and the YB400 is the one I use the most because it ranks most highly considering performance against replacement cost. It takes a licken' and keeps on ticken'! It performs well and baggage handlers aren't interested in stealing it. It has survived many "drop tests" and supplies beautiful FM stereo. SW DX depends on your choice of antenna, but mine performs unusually well from the whip.

Unless you can find a killer deal on a sony 7600, you should go for the YB400. If you are looking for a "traveler," I would go with the YB400.

Worth exactly 2 cents....Your mileage may vary...

It's ridiculous what an antique radio can go for nowadays. Even the most Plain Jane AA5 wood table radio can go for hundreds of dollars. I remember when you could go into an antique store (a major one, not a dusty little forgotten place in some hick town) and have yourself a nice 5 tube wood cabinet table radio for $60. And it WORKED! This was back in the early 90s, when I was collecting. Nowadays a wood table radio that has major veneer damage and does not work can go for several hundred dollars. If it's a Zenith "black dial" (a radio that has a distinctive big black dial) it can go for more. And the rarest Zeniths can fetch absolutely obscene prices. Mirror radios are extremely rare, and fetched big bucks even when I was in the hobby, but the prices being asked and paid for even the blandest pre WW2 table radios nowadays are absolutely astonishing. ONE HUNDRED GRAND for a radio that's nearly 70 years old?

And then, after washing the blood off, she would have gone to your computer and promptly emailed the seller that the bid was made "in

No, they were quite clear that the scholarship was FOR baton twirling. Apparently there are golf, tennis, cheer leading and other "sport" scholarships also.  Tether ball, hopscotch, marbles and 4 square, here we come.  None of these are available at universities this Albertan in Canada. We also don't have skiing, snow mobiling or fishing scholarships.  Would've liked the fishing one.

there were 10 different  legitimate bidders who bid from $20K to almost $30K.
I think the winning bidder who bid only once at $50K was out of his mind...if that's a mistake, but it takes two clicks to bid. The reality check came after the bidding ended.

EBay should throw him off EBay, after his wife auctions his genitals for a

It will also wipe out low VHF TV (channels 2-6, about 62-88 Mhz). But from what I've read I suspect that the FCC is seriously trying to end over the air TV broadcasting, so this may just be the excuse they need to pull the plug on analog TV and force every American to buy a pricey (several thousand dollars) high definition TV, and force them to use either cable or satellite services that have expensive monthly fees. I personally think the FCC may be playing with fire here-if there's one thing Americans care about, it's TV, and suddenly rendering 300 million + analog TV sets useless may create a severe backlash. The British pulled something similar off when they stopped all 405 line TV broadcasting, but the Brits care much less about TV than Americans do.

I got my "new" one yesterday, and tried it out - worked fine.  This time.

Is that really any sillier than someone paying $130,000 for a 1967
Mustang, $350,000 for a MB Gullwing, $250,000 for a Pembroke table, $10,000 for a postage stamp?  I've seen them all at auctions over the years.

There are collectors of almost anything, and some of them have the money to spend.  Just wish I was the seller of that old wooden radio.

The old testament cannot be called the Christian bible.  It was written by Jews, for Jews, and long before Christ.  Did you think King James wrote it?

BTW, Can't you stick to shortwave?

Greetings!  I know I should have contacted MFJ when I got this thing, but it has been a few years ago now.  I have never gotten it to work.  All I ever get is jibberish.  Do any of you have one, and can you give me any secrets?  Will it work with any other software other than it's own?  Thanks for the read!
Have a great week!  Jon.

I would rather have the money to spend. :) It must be nice being able to pay a quarter of a million dollars for a table and not think twice. I want to be able to do THAT. Just happening to have a radio that somebody is willing to pay $50,000 for isn't as great as being the person who can plunk down $50,000 for that radio and have it be a drop in the ocean of their fortune.

What bothers me most about the high-end collectibles is that many of them are never used in the way they are supposed to be.  I can't speak for the radio in question (I sincerely hope the eventual buyer reconditions the innards as neccesary and uses it) but I am versed in the vintage guitar market.  There are certain Gibson Les Pauls and Martin acoustics that sell easily in the $30,000 range at auction, and most of them are not played - or even wall-hung.  They go into bank vaults as an "investment". Shrewd money planning, maybe, but that instrument may never again be used for what it was designed for - making music. I'll bet there are old Hallicrafters out there you could say the same thing about. I think that's sad.

Funny you mention that---after I looked through the listing, read about the damage and wear, and with the high price in mind, I immediately scrolled up to check if it was Radio-Mart that was selling it.

Not necessarily. The corporate entity isn't automatically "bad", just like any other thing isn't bad or good, it's just a vehicle. There are many small corporations out there, and many medium sized ones, that focus on keeping their customers happy and don't try to force their hands. But anything can get too big and too powerful, and when something or somebody gets too powerful they tend to try to bend everybody to their will and not see anything wrong with trying to force the hand of their customers. It is this phenomoenon of something that is so big and powerful that is has the power to force the will of millions of people to go along with its wishes that liberals are against, not "corporations" per se.

> The main reason lefties don't like corporations is that they are a big part > of the capitalist system, which is (of course) what they REALLY dislike.

Some do. I don't. Capitalism as originally concieved had many sellers and many buyers competing freely. But when there are too few sellers or too few buyers or both the market gets distorted and one or a handful of sellers or buyers has the power to force the other side to do what it wants, often against its will. That's not competition, which is the essence of capitalism (not corporations). When there are too few sellers AND buyers then you get what some call "sweetheart deals". These can be fine if it doesn't entail bending other third parties to the will of the sweetheart deal. But if there are third parties involved, the sweetheart deal usually goes sour. The no bid contracts given to Halliburton by the feds are one such sweetheart deal that forced millions into situations they didn't agree with.

Unlike today, when the only debate you hear is far right Republicans "debating" moderate right Republicans. Same devil, different cloak. Same bad situation.

Thanks, I tried the Icom R-75, and thought that I could barely make out some of the regulars. It wasn't good enough for a copy though. The R-75 has the outdoor antenna, the Yaesu FRG-100 is limited to an indoor antenna that goes around the room near the ceiling. Surprisingly, the Yaesu performs better on some shows than the Icom, likely due to the shorter antenna wire being closer to the resonant frequency of some stations.

The audio on my 7600GR is quite decent, and excellent using headphones.

I needed some old cabinet to hold my broken and rusted Leica and Hasselblad scrap heap. It was getting hard to walk around the Media Room without stubbing my manicured toes on some loose collectible.

I mean..think about it. What's more important? My toenails or a lousy fifty grand?

I'm sure you've read these letters asking you to send $1 to six different addresses. Putting your home address or mailing address on the internet can be risky, but through PayPal all you have to provide is your email address. It's safe and easy. Just go to www.paypal.com and set up your FREE account! No credit card is needed. I am not a gullible person and have never trusted things like this, but I gave it a try. Hey it's only $6. I figured at least 6 people would respond out of the millions of people that use the internet. You should give it a try too! You have nothing to lose, and thousands to gain! Read on for the letter that I found (of course, I added my PayPal e-mail on #6)...

IT WORKS!!! BUT YOU HAVE TO FOLLOW IT TO THE LETTER FOR IT TO WORK!!!!
A little while back, I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands of dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, "Yeah, right, this must be some kind of scam" but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept reading. Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 though PayPal to each of the emails stated in the article. You then place your own email address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200 news groups. (There are thousands) No catch. That was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured what have I got to lose except $6.00, right? Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a little worried about the legal aspects of it. It follows the same regulations as the "mailed chain letters, which according to the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) is indeed legal! Then I invested the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!? Within 7 days, I started getting money in my PayPal account! I was shocked! I figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my first week, I made about $20.00. By the end second week I had made a total over $1,200.00!!! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 and it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $36,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly. It's Certainly worth $6.00. I have spent more than that on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works? Also, make sure you print a copy of this article now, so that you can get the information off of it as you need it.

REQUIREMENTS: You must have a confirmed PayPal account. If you do not have a PayPal account you can go to www.paypal.com and follow the instructions to set up a free account. In order to place the initial $6 into your account, you will have to confirm your bank account with PayPal (which may take a few days). PayPal is 100% secure and is used my millions of people world wide. Confirming a www.paypal.com account simply means (1) PayPal will first ask you to confirm the email you used to sign up your PayPal account by sending you an email with a link for you to click to that email. As soon as you click that link your email is confirmed. (2) PayPal will then make two small deposits into your bank account if you set up your PayPal account with a checking or savings bank account. Or PayPal will make two small deposits to your credit card if you set up your PayPal account with your credit card. Then after a few days (it takes up to a few days for these deposits to appear in your bank account or on your credit card statement) then after a few days you go back to the www.paypal.com website and sign in. Then you click where it says this account is not yet confirmed. A screen will pop up that gives you 2 boxes to fill in. You then enter the numbers of the 2 small deposit amounts (two separate 2 digit numbers) that were deposited to your bank account or credit card. Now you have a working and confirmed PayPal account and can receive payments.

Send, though PayPal, $1.00 to each email on the below list. Make the subject of the payment "Email List" and in the comments, write "PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR EMAIL LIST." What you are doing is creating a service by this - and best of all you are not giving your address to anyone you do not know. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL!! YOU ARE CREATING A SERVICE. Here are the latest PayPal e-mails on the e-mail lists:

#1)brittany...@excite.com

#2) mth...@renc.igs.net

#3) Mishav...@aol.com

#4) nike31...@aol.com

#5) careent...@hotmail.com

#6) jjrvn...@hotmail.com

www.paypal.com

Comments: PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR EMAIL LIST

[STEP 2]
Now take the #1) email off the list that you see above, move the other addresses up one (6 becomes 5 &amp; 5 becomes 4, etc) the put YOUR email address (the one used in your PayPal account) as #6) on the list. MAKE SURE THE EMAIL YOU SUPPLY IS EXACTLY AS IT APPEARS IN YOUR PAYPAL ACCOUNT

[STEP 3]
Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at least 200 newsgroups, message boards, etc. (I think there are close to 32,000 groups) All you need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you make - as well as everyone else on the list! In this situation your job is to let as many people see this letter as possible. So they will make you and me reach!!!! You can even start posting the moment your email is confirmed. Payments will still appear in your PayPal account even while your bank account is being confirmed.

DIRECTIONS ON HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS/MESSAGE BOARDS.

[Step 1]
You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your CURSOR at the beginning of this letter and drag your CURSOR to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into your computer's temporary memory.

[Step 2]
Open a blank Notepad file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'Edit' menu select 'Paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your email to the list.

[Step 3]
Save your new Notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different sittings, you'll always have this file to go back to.

Use Netscape or Internet Explorer and try searching for various newsgroups, on-line forums, message boards, bulletin boards, chat sites, discussions, discussion groups, online communities, etc. EXAMPLE: go to any search engine like yahoo.com, google.com, altavista.com, excite.com, then search with subjects like "millionaire message board" or "money making message board" or "opportunity message board" or "money making discussions" or "business bulletin board" or "money making forum" etc. You will find thousands and thousands of message boards. Click them one by one then you will find the option to post a new message.

[Step 5]
Visit these message boards and post this article as a new message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting 'Paste' from the 'Edit' menu. Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that everyone sees as they scroll thru the list of postings in a particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your first one! Congratulations! THAT'S IT!! All you have to do is jump to different newsgroups and post away. After you get the hang of it, it will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup! REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS AND/OR MESSAGE BOARDS YOU POST IN, THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!! BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200 That's it! You will begin receiving money within days! JUST MAKE SURE THE EMAIL YOU SUPPLY IS EXACTLY AS IT APPEARS ON PAYPAL.

Have fun!

For a auction to reach a skyrocketed price on eBay, TWO people need to be involved (if the bid is a 'joke'.

Based on the proxy bidding system, let's say someone sells a widget that's worth $500. If someone bids $500.00, and then the 'jokester' comes and bids $50,000. The 'bid' is actually the next increment of $500 - probably like $505. And that is what the auction will close at.

Rapper's Inaugural Invite a Shocker, Say Family Advocates

By Fred Jackson, Bill Fancher, and Jody Brown
January 6, 2005

(AgapePress) - Christians who helped re-elect George W. Bush are in for a major shock. WorldNetDaily reports that organizers of this month's inauguration festivities have invited one of the most vile rock starts in the country to entertain Republican young people.

WorldNetDaily describes Kid Rock as "a popular vulgar rock-rapper whose lyrics wouldn't begin to pass muster with the Federal Communications Commission." But that is who Republican organizers have chosen to headline the entertainment at the inaugural youth concert, hosted by none other than the president's two daughters Jenna and Barbara.

For those who may not be familiar with Kid Rock, also known as Robert James Ritchie, he is a Detroit-based rapper who, among other things, has received a 1999 MTV video music award for being the "Sluttiest Male Celebrity," and shared the same stage as Janet Jackson at last year's controversial Super Bowl halftime show. His lyrics often focus on the recreational nature of sex and send a message of female sexual exploitation.

In addition, a search on Yahoo! indicates he performed in at least one pornographic video (released in 2000) along with well-known porn stars Tricia Deveraux, Ron Jeremy, and Teri Weigel. The video was produced by infamous porn video director John Stagliano, whose trail of porn videos slinks back to the early 1980s.

The rapper's invitation has created a stir among many pro-family supporters of the president. Dr. Don Wildmon, founder and chairman of the American Family Association, says the White House has sent a shocking statement to millions of families who supported his re-election.

"Kid Rock is an inexcusable choice," Wildmon says in a press release. "His music lyrics serve to teach our young men to disrespect women in a most vile, self-serving manner. Obviously, someone on the Presidential Inauguration Committee has made an extremely poor judgment call."

Bob Knight of the Culture and Family Institute concurs. "I think the Republicans are so sensitive to the fact that the Democrats have a lot more Hollywood support, and support from MTV, that they'll take anything they can get," he says, "but taking Kid Rock is going a step too far. [He] advocates mindless sex, he uses the f-word -- he's anything but a representative of family values."

Both Wildmon and Knight believe Kid Rock needs to be removed from the inaugural program as soon as possible. But can that happen? Knight thinks so.

"I think if they hear enough outrage from the people who elected President Bush, that this is a slap in the to their values, that they'll have to reconsider," Knight says. "He ought to be dis-invited."

WorldNetDaily quotes California pro-family leader Randy Thomasson who says if Kid Rock is allowed to perform at this inauguration event, it will send a clear message to pro-family Americans that the GOP has "taken them for a ride and ditched them in the gutter."

That is why Thomasson, executive director of Campaign for Children and Families, tells WND that the rapper's presence at a GOP event is "more than inconsistent" with the pro-family principles of the Republican Party. "It's a sham," he says. "This guy is one of the worst role models for youth imaginable."

Hi all.
I have a mint condition Sony ICF 7600GR. It is boxed with manual and the reel antenna. I have a reciept of purchase. It has about 6/8 months warranty left on it.
I would like if possible to swap it for a base model HF reciever, not too bothered about looks, make or condition. But would obviously like it to be working perfectly.
If anybody is interestd, please email me at short.wave@fsmail.net
I have another private email address but use the above to stop spam on my main account. I shall of course reply to any emails using my private ntl account and include my details such as contact phone number etc etc.
Thank's for looking

PS. I would consider an overseas deal but would have to come to some arrangment in respect of import duty that we have to pay on incoming goods into this country.(UK)

Every couple of weeks someone asks where, in the US, they can get a Lowe receiver repaired. Well, just out of curiosity I inquired with a place called Land Air Communications, and they say that they will repair Lowe receivers.

I've never worked with Land Air Communications and so I can't vouch for their work. Their website exudes a certain credibility in my view, but aside from reviewing their site I know nothing about them. Still, I thought that someone who was desperate to get a Lowe receiver repaired would be glad to have this information.

To view Land Air Communication's website, just go here:

1)Get a ham license. Every state law that I know of allows hams to have radio that will recieve police frequencies in there car. However not all LEO will understand. The KY AG wrote a lettr for hams to carry in KY to help avoid this hassle. I supect the ARRL or the rec.radio.scanner group can provide specifics on a state by state case.
2)Be prepared for some interesting noise problems. Modern engines/brakes/suspenesion often have rather noisy CPU control systems that produce odd noises in the 5~30MHz frequency range.
3)The ignition system in modern engines is a killer noise source.
Your radio will need a very good noise blanker.
4)It is very difficult to get a really effective SW antenna on a car or truck.
An active antenna will work, but tends to magnify the mentined noise sources.

There is an exception to the "you need two bidders to drive the price up" rule.

If an auction hasn't met reserve yet, it will go from wherever it is to the amount of the reserve the first time someone bids high enough.

On this radio, the reserve was set at $50,000.

Two bidders had maxed out tied at $28,700. The last guy came along and bid at least $50,000 so the auction went right up to that.

The bid may or may not have been a joke. If it was my auction, and it involved that kind of dollars, I think I'd have relisted it by now.

>response to it and of course how everyone should behave instead.

Hey, I heard it too. (6195 kHz, 04:20 on Sunday, local Saturday evening)

I thought it was pretty frigging cynical, but probably too close to the truth. This fund raising thing is getting a bit out of hand, and his point is that if this could have negative effects next time around and a lot of beneficiaries aren't the poorest countries around.

People who are on a feel-good trip thinking that their efforts can only help and not hurt should think about their addiction to "doing good things" that really aren't necessary. Remember the people who donated tons of stuff to New York City after 9/11 which later was found to be unneeded and looted out of the warehouses it was stored in. The poor bastard who bankrupted himself buying a truckload of gloves and stuff should be a cautionary tale for all of us.

And I bet Robert Green would be amused that you would classify him as anything as right wing as "liberal".

Did you listen to Amsterdam Forum, too. It was interesting. A repeat of a program from Oct. '03 about the problems caused by (and to) people who live on the Internet and tailor their readings and participation to only things they agree with, and how a forum where everybody is in agreement leads the participants getting more and more extreme and disconnected from reality. (I don't think that's a problem with r.r.s).

Maybe all the folks who want to listen to the Radio National track, instead of ABC Local Radio are going online.  Early Saturday (local time), Radio Netherlands on 12080/9345 wasn't coming in so I had the great choice of BBC's Sportsworld, or ABC Local's cowboy music program.  Feh.

The one that suddenly appeared just after Christmas, then disappeared just after New Years, but now is back. Whoever is doing this is quite close, RF wise, to my Northern California location; I hear the noise even when I have the radio in a position that is usually a "dead spot". It totally wipes out the BBC's signal. I'm SURE this isn't a mixing product or front end overloading; it doesn't appear on the stations on either side of the BBC's channel. Is anybody else hearing this? I know that Arnie and Mark Zenier heard it last time, so I'm not going crazy. Tune in to the BBC on 5975 and 9525 around 0300, just to see if you hear it. I'd like to know if more easterly DXers like Ace can hear this and what they make of it.

So, "tote your portable ;-)".  Well, I mean that in the real sense of taking a radio around your neighborhood and seeing if it's local or outside the area.  If you don't have a portable shortwave, see if you can pick it up on the high end of the AM band.  Back when I really had a problem, I found that it was the neighbor's line doubled back projection TV when somebody was playing with the game console.  (That, and a corroded antenna wire).

The stuff I get now sounds like one or more computer monitor or TV horizontal scan circuits, so I expect that one of the neighbors is leaving their TV on.  Or got a new set or 'puter for Xmas. Since they run on (sort of) standard frequencies, the interference can seem the same all around the world, but comes from a multitude of local sources instead of one very powerful distant one.  (OTOH, if it's drifty, suspect those damn compact fluorescent lamps).

9525 has been so variable lately.  Last Friday was strong all evening until signoff at 04:00, but other nights last week were just horrible. Makes me wonder if the folks in Florida let their antenna fall in the swamp over Xmas vacation.

Keep track of the signal strength.  The interference may be there all along but doesn't really have an impact unless the signals are down around S2-3.

Andrew Moseley (G7VOT) on January 9, 2005

OFCOM are the UK's Regulator for Communications. And they have come up with a pathetic plan called the Spectrum Framework Review.

After reading this please visit my Notice board here http://g7vot.myikonboard.com/viewthread.php?threadid=20 and let me know your opinion.

UK Hams. Your opinion counts in this matter don't just sit there and let others act for you as it may not be enough. Amatuers outside the uk can help too by emailing Ofcom here, contact@ofcom.org.uk and let them know what you think.

Ofcoms Spectrum Framework Review has been given a thorough examination and what has been uncovered is very very alarming. If you have not yet sent a letter of concern to OFCOM, then reading the following may well give you a kick up the butt to do so. Deadline is the 15th of February.

It is also with a serious request to put pen to paper and reply to the Ofcom Proposal. Failure to inform them that they are acting in a totally cavalier manner, will result in the radio spectrum used by Radio Amateurs being swallowed up by Mobile Phone Companies.

By the time that Ofcom realise their errors, the infrastructure will be fragmented and the damage will be done. It should be realised that Ofcom is now no longer Staffed by Engineers/Radio Amateurs, it is entirely Commercial people with Mobile Phone backgrounds who are attracted by the possibility of charging someone �1m/MHz.

The phrase "If you do not use it, you will loose it" will be wasted unless YOU put pen to paper.

Summarised Ofcom's 23rd November 2004, proposals for Licenses and spectrum.

o Spectrum Framework Review with a Deadline for replies by 15 February, 2005.

o Advocates total disregard of all International rules in the interest of National flexibility

o Suggest that 60% of all spectrum is tradable

o Is in favour of Software/Cognitive Radio that could potentially operate on top of Radio Amateurs without warning

o Proposes to withdraw from CB, Amateur, Maritime licensing

o Proposes to simplify access to entrants - barely after the new Licence structure is in place

o Has caught RSGB totally off guard, with a weaker structure

o All Radio Amateurs and Clubs are urged to reply with a copy to their MP with a request that he/she questions Ofcom on their intentions.

o Original Documents on http://www.ofcom.org.uk
Be warned this is a massive document which seems as thought it has been made deliberately big - the cynical would say "to stop people reading it"! It is OK for Broadband users.

o Easier to download from www.essexrepeatergroup.org.uk

Many of the threats are TLAs (Three Letter Acronyms) so here are some:-

o PSB - Public Service Broadcasting

o DTT - Digital Terrestrial Television

o DRLs - Digital Replacement Licences

o SFN - Single Frequency Network - BBC/National DAB is a SFN

o DVB-T, DVB-H - Digital Video Broadcasting

o DAB-S, DAB-T - Digital Audio Broadcasting (Satellite, Terrestrial)

o SFR - Spectrum Framework Review

o ACC - Adaptive Cruise Control, - uses SRR and LRR

o SRR/LRR - Short /Long Range Car Radar on 79 or 24GHz

o UWB - Ultra Wideband

o SDR - Software Defined Radio

o A whole new set of threats is on us now. . .

o Most attention so far on Broadband over Powerlines

o BPL - Broadband over Power Lines - USA

o PLT - Power Line Telecoms - UK

o Data can be Voice, Internet or TV

o In use by Southern Electric

o Raises noise floors etc over most of HF bands

Yes, those old wood floor model radios are great.  My brother-in-law bought a house not too long ago and resting up in the rafters of the garage was an old mw and shortwave floor model radio.  The dial was so big we first thoght it was an early television!  Name escapes me right now, but I think it's a Zenith, complete with tuning eye and an internal rotating antenna in a silver metal box.  The mahogany case is dark, but pretty much complete.  It's mine for the shipping, if I can convince the wife it will "work" with our furniture.

>>US submarine docks at Guam after accident

www.chinaview.cn 2005-01-11 00:12:30

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (Xinhuanet) -- The US Los Angeles-class nuclear submarine, USS San Francisco, which ran aground on Friday killing one sailor, arrived in Guam Monday afternoon Guam time,the US Pacific Fleet said.

Joseph Allen Ashley, a machinist's mate 2nd class, died Sunday from injuries suffered during the accident, and 23 other sailors were treated for injuries such as broken bones, lacerations, bruises and a back injury, the Pacific Fleet said in a statement.

The submarine had a crew of 137 and was enroute to Brisbane, Australian for a port visit at the time of the incident, approximately 350 nautical miles (about 648 km) south of Guam.

The Navy was investigating the cause and circumstances of the incident, the statement said.

Navy officials said there was no damage to the sub's nuclear reactor. Enditem<<

Parts of the HF spectrum will always be protected for military and emergency communications.

The remainder isn't very much spectrum for broadband purposes, especially considering the high noise levels and possibility of interference from just about anywhere in the world.

Building compact, efficent antennas is a real problem at HF, and using higher power with inefficent antennas hardly seems like a good solution for a battery powered portable..

Yes, I had a similar experience with Russian RTTY. I was able translate enough of the cyrillic to know these were health and welfare messages from some guys on very lonely remote duty sent to the family back home. Made me realize we were a whole lot more alike than different.

I was using a Kenwood R-5000 and AEA PK232MBX fed to an extensively modified TRS Color Computer and 40 column monitor.

The RZ1 is an unsupported nightmare.  Unless you want to do this as some kind of nerd hobby thing, the satellite radio option makes a lot of sense.  Sirius carries the BBC, plus WRN and will keep you interested.  Otherwise, make me an offer for my HF150.  I'll even throw in an adaptor for Motorola to SO-239.

''Hatred''??  Who talks like that?

Dissent is the highest form of patriotism.  Blind obedience is treason.

Whoever told you that being critical of the government = hating the country is your enemy.  I am your friend.

Indeed, Frank. I wonder if many of those people who would propose to use HF as if was the new frontier of digital communications know exactly what they are dealing with.

HF is an unruly beast, where sections can be entirely shut down depending on solar activity, or a small signal can sometimes be propagated across the world. In addition, it has nowhere near the bandwidth capacity of the higher frequencies. And finally, the ham sections are such a small portion of the HF spectrum, that it would not make much difference if they went away or stayed.

Most modern "wireless" apps need the characteristics of GHz + frequencies.

It varies by field office. I've heard some areas get good cooperation and enforcement; the Chicago office traditionally takes action only when a strobe lamp is burned out on a land-mobile tower.

I think "pod people" are supposed to be like zombies, blindly following a leader who may not be visible, oblivious to the real world around them.

If you'd like to know more, I suggest hanging out near a theater showing a Michael Moore movie.

Perhaps that goes with Sinclair Broadcasting's running "Stolen Honor" just before election day and the White House paying off Armstrong Williams to tout "No Child Left Behind"?

Perhaps it shows why the FCC shouldn't let all the broadcast media be concentrated in just a few hands so that all broadcast news is filtered through a few corporate offices?

In several cities, including New York, and Los Angeles, there were two all news radio stations, one owned by Westinghouse and one owned by CBS.

Now, of course, both stations are owned by Viacom / Infinity.

Also in New York, one newspaper and two TV stations are owned by News Corporation. (Murdoch)

About the only feature of HF vs UHF or microwave is that distant nodes or stations can directly talk to each other without supporting infrastructure (phone lines or Internet).  Same thing that attracts ham radio operators.  Though the fact that a pair of users will hog the same bandwidth world-wide is not such a hot feature....  Unless digital shortwave broadcasting is desired, forget it.  And how well will digital handle QSB and QRM and QRN?  Assuming the modulation method is designed to cope with such...

Well, digital error checking can take care of that..... again and again and again and again and again, until it works, or more likely, times out.

Great, as long as you don't mind a slow connection. Of course, maybe that is why BPL is at DSL speeds instead of cable modem speeds.

Zenith's chair-side radios, in particular,

I was just sitting here thinking about the nice one I passed up for $75 a few years ago.

Holy crap, what a great price.

Right now, the Transoceanics seem to be going (at least locally) for around that, thanks to the rare/expensive (so they say) 1L6 tube, intact with both antennas (MW and SW), but I have yet to find one with an outstanding, clean case.

Yeah, the more I think about the darn thing I wish I'd bought it. As I recall the owner of the shop later gave it to her daughter who committed suicide. Who knows, the little shop is hardly ever open and I've not been there for some time. Maybe I should try to stop when it's open...

The '7000 model (don't remember the nomenclature precisely) is, for its low parts count (or maybe because of its low parts count, acutally), a really decent portable.

O.K., guys, I got it.  Don't really need to know the station's bandwidth.
It's just that I've never heard a station sound exactly like that.

How about my question re:  modulation (limit ?), and any idea what DAB stands for?

Been there done that. The last one failed about 10 years ago and the utiltiy did nothing until it died completly.
And the comment about a BB riffle was a joke.
As far as trying to get the FCC to do anything, someone is smoking bad dope.
The FCC is out of the enforcement business, unless of course a young lady manages to have a "Wardroboe malfunction", or a DJ gets too gross.
We have some really cold weather moving in and that will kill it. It was warm the last 2 nights and the light worked OK. When the temp drops below freezing, it starts strobing, and the colder it gets, the faster the strobe. The last one went the same way.

The FCC may have rules on paper, but they don't seem interested or able to enforce them. You are very luck your utiltiy even tries to "do right".
As I pointed out in another post, the light

PHIL,
"WHY" I would Buy the Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio
I would agree with you, that in many respects the Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellit Radio should be a better receiver than the Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium, and I love my GS800M.
What have been many of the problems and grips that have been written about here with the GS800M.
-  Small Ferrite Rod Antenna
-  Internal RF Noise from the Radios Circuits
-  Hash from the LCD Display. and many more . . . all this in a big, Big. BIG ! Box.
Well for Eton / Drake /Tecsun to take the GS800M and place it into a much smaller Box; would mean that at least two of the above problems would have had to be Fix or at least significantly reduced to at least the same performance levels as the GS800M.
Imagine a GS800M with a 'lower' Noise Floor and able to "Hear" those Weak Signals that are just now on the edge of Listenability with the GS800M.
The nature of the Business Product Process Cycle is to Continously Seek to Build-It-Better and Make-It-Cheaper.
[ Increase the Value of the Product to the Customer. ]

The Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium was ETON Corps
Premier [Flag Ship] "Big Box" Radio. The Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio is designed to be ETON Corps Premier 'Small Box' Radio. For ETON Corp, the Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio has to be at least as-good-as the GS800M; and ideally much better. Remember, it has been four years since ETON Corp has released the GS800M and it need a New STAR for it's Consumer Marketing "Image". If the Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio is as-good-as the GS800M and in a 'smaller' Box; it will be a Hit with the Buying Public. (An Executive Gift) However, if the Eton
'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio is much better than the GS800M; then it will be a Hit with the Radio Enthusiast who will feel they need to "Got-to-Have-It !"
Please Note - That when I write about the Eton E1 XM Radio;
I 'label' it as the Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio. That is because 'for me' what it is as the Eton
'Elite' E1 Receiver is what I am interested in as a Radio.
What it will do as an AM/MW, FM and Shortwave Radio is the
"Why" that will make 'me' want to Buy it. The fact that it also comes 'with' XM Satellit Radio is not a Selling Point for me.

hi Michael:
i see no reason to doubt Drake, who designed the R8B, SW8, and Sat800. IMO the E1XM will surpass the performance of the Sat800 due to the PBT. add small size [S350-like], 1700 memories, and likely 5-kHz tuning steps . . .
it should be a winner.

phil :)

That is correct.

From eBay:

A bid increment will go higher than the standard increment in two situations:
To meet the reserve amount
To beat a competing bidder's high bid

Not true at all. If you believe that, then YOU perhaps are smoking bad dope.

I have recent first hand experience.

If you had to wait ten years, then you simply did not complain loud enough or to the right people.

As to the BB gun, an AK-47 or an SKS does a much finer job.

I've seen 13181 listed as being used by fixed coastal stations, so what you may have heard was some ship to shore traffic.

I've also seen the freq. listed as being used by the US military at times.

RADIONMAN,
It is not silly at all when 3-7 Years later you can sell:
The {$130,000} 1967 Mustang for $200K
The {$350,000} for a MB Gullwing for $475K
The {$250,000} Pembroke Table for $325K
The {$10,000} Stamp for $15K
For the most part Collecting is usually about Pride of "Possessing" an Item or about the 'Appreciation' that an Item will being over time.

I too would suspect this area. If it were permanently low in sensitivity, the first mixer is the likely culprit- hard to find here in the states.

I have a 62 fender strat I still play and my buddy plays a 50s goldtop Les Paul. Heck DXAce plays a fender Broadcaster that's worth a small fortune. Some of us are still playing these things. Thank God!

I have generally had no trouble getting malfunctioning streetlights fixed within a few days here in California.  Of course, here it is the Hey!  I am slightly on the liberal side, and I don't feel this way at all.

Robert Green is wrong - My wife and I sent some $$ because we felt bad (I won't differentiate between pity and sympathy here) for the folks in SE Asia that got smacked by the wave.  It wasn't guilt, and it surely isn't guilt that makes us happy our government is chipping in either.

And apart from that, it's just what we do...and that makes me proud.

And I think, if another disaster befalls someone, we'll do it again...because it's just what we do.  Green is wrong.

But Telamon, you don't quite have it right, either.  Not all liberals think like Green.

Comet Macholz.  A pretty nice one if you have even binocs (the optical kind of course, not the ferrite kind).

You are right...many collectibles are no longer used as they were intended. They are put in a vault or on a shelf. And the collectibles don't necessarily have to be expensive to just sit. The ice cream scoop collectors don't pay a whole lot for most of those early kitchen tools. I'm going to guess the evening dish of B&J Chubby Hubby get's scooped with a modern aluminum ice cream scoop.

I think it is unfortunate that price keeps old collectibles from being used. I guess that's why I prowl real auctions, estate sales and flea markets. I've found a working Zenith TO for $10.00, a National HRO 500 for $35.00 that only needed a new power cord, a National Panasonic RF-5000b for $50.00, etc. All of them were in great cosmetic shape and were put to work as found.

At least from reports it is fairly certain it is not direct from CAR, but rather either Issoudoun in France or via Gabon.

Apparently some conflicting info in the current HFCC data also.

I myself rather doubt that it is direct from CAR.

It's just that I've never heard a station sound exactly like that.

> How about my question re: modulation (limit ?),

You can't exceed 100% modulation on negative peaks because the modulation envelope can't be less than zero. There are "super modulation" techniques that allow a bit over 100% on positive peaks.

As for bandwidth, if there is no distortion, the bandwidth of an AM station should be twice the highest audio frequency transmitted. For high fidelity voice modulation, the sibilants (mostly "s" and "t" sounds) may have frequency components up to nearly 10 kHz. Music can go higher than that. So unless the higher audio frequencies are filtered, the bandwidth of an AM station could be 20 or 30 kHz (not good with the 5 kHz channel spacing on shortwave). Just for reference, I believe the allowable bandwidth for an AM broadcast station in the US is 10 kHz.

Logic has given me no answers...how does Radio-Mart get such high prices for stuff that people passed over a couple of weeks earlier. if you won't pay $100 on January 1, why will you pay $200 on January 21 for the same item ?

Spock is confounded !

FIGHT IGNORANCE: READ BUZZFLASH

Bush's Baby Tax: A Bill for Tens of Thousands of Dollars Presented to Every Baby Born in America By George W. Bush.

Note: This January 10, 2005 BuzzFlash Editorial marks the tenth in 20 consecutive editorials BuzzFlash will be publishing through January 20th.

A BUZZFLASH EDITORIAL

You've known them in your lives. The guys who go on credit card spending sprees and then skip town leaving their families to pay off their debts. They are louses, creeps, guys who mortgage the future of their children to their high off the hog living and lavish life styles.

Everything seems fine: the Porsche, the mansion, the champagne, the first class airfare, the Penthouse hotel suites, until the debt eventually comes do -- and Mr. Grifter skips town, leaving his wife to deal with the credit card companies.

That's just what George W. Bush is doing to America. He's giving tax cuts to the wealthy during a period when the asset and income gap between the richest Americans and the middle class and poor has widened to its largest distance ever. He's enriching campaign contributors with war profiteering contracts.

He's giving the middle class a few hundred dollars back in taxes, while charging them thousands of dollars for the war in Iraq -- from the pockets of the taxpayers to the wallets of Halliburton.

Bush is the "Music Man," but the band costumes don't miraculously show up in this real life story about a flim-flam man who became president. Yes, Professor Hill may have pulled the "moral values" con on River City, but they didn't end up with a "baby tax" that will come due for all of America's children, courtesy of the Bush budget busters.

It's been the goal all along of the chief Bush domestic policy guru, Grover Norquist, to run up such a grossly unconscionable debt that the American system of public services, including education, will have to be cut off. Or as Norquist has so "eloquently" said, public services will be thrown into a bathtub and drowned.

Meanwhile, in place of the repealed "estate tax," which only affected millionaires, we now have the "baby tax," which will be borne by every new baby in America.

The baby tax, brought to you by George W. Bush, who took a surplus and turned it into a record-breaking debt in no time at all.

With each birth certificate, a tax form should now be given to the newly born in America. The babies might as well start paying off the mountain of debt Bush is leaving in his reckless wake. Maybe parents can start a "baby tax" account before their newborn even arrives.

Instead of the "death tax" for the wealthy, Bush has instituted the "baby tax" for every new American.

Professor Hill, Mr. Music Man, you ain't got nothing on George W. Bush. This guy could sell you a car without a motor and get you to pay for his limousine fare home.

about some of the things it takes to win at poker.
I have been winning at poker month after month for years. I know that it is a game where skill will win in the long run. I would like poker to be more widely excepted as a sport. Once you start thinking about the advanced concepts of poker, wich I will  talk  about some of them in my website and if you play a little bit so that you can grasp the concepts  better, then you will start to realize how much skill is actually involved when playing poker and you might find yourself facing the challenge of a lifetime. I sure did. Poker is a competitive sport where the best player will end up with the money in the long run. If you like to compete or just like a challenge, then you will like playing poker after you have learned more about it.

My site is new and I have not had the time to edit some pages yet, so

USDA Mad Cow
Coverup Unravels
By Robert Cohen
Not Milk.com
12-8-4

I now realize that there may never again be a confirmed case of Mad Cow Disease during the George Bush Administration. Oh, the diseased animals are out there, but in the name of homeland security, we are being "protected" in this Orwell-like twenty first century by rulers who think we need sheltering. We may never know the true reason that Ann Veneman resigned her post as USDA's boss the day after the latest Mad Cow incident began. Shortly before her (forced?) resignation, she remarked that her intention was to serve through a second term. Did she leave because she was ordered to fudge the Mad Cow results? I've discovered new evidence that is quite suggestive of a continuing coverup. You be the judge, as I reveal disturbing new information in this column.

The problem with lying, is that many lies have to be told to cover up the original lie, so that the liar often forgets to protect the original lie.

Records show that after USDA concluded that the pre-Thanksgiving cow was not a Mad Cow, they then began to test an unprecedented number of other cows. Had the test come back negative, USDA would logically have gone back to previous test levels. Instead, significantly more animals were tested.

During that ten week period prior to the discovery of America's latest case of Mad Cow Disease, the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) examined the brains of 60,655 slaughtered creatures. That's an average of 6,066 per week.

During that one week period of discovery (11/15-11/21), USDA tested 7,900 cows, an increase of 1,835 over the previous ten week average. Such a dramatic increase makes sense, of course, but what followed after USDA's "safe" conclusion contradicts USDA's lie.

Once USDA fudged the results, I anxiously awaited the following week's data. Was USDA telling the truth? If so, it would have been logical to return to the previous test level of 6,066 tested animals per week. If USDA officials were more concerned than they let on, the test numbers would be close or would exceed the key week's 7,900 level.

Here are the results.

During the Thanksgiving week of November 22-November 28, how many cows were tested for Mad Cow Disease? Most of America enjoyed two weekdays days off of work, plus a weekend. A shortened four day work week had to have resulted in fewer animals being tested, particularly after USDA's big lie. So, from 11/22-11/28, just 5,878 animals were tested. If USDA had been telling the truth, the following week's testing would have reverted to the running 6,000 average or lower. If USDA had fudged the test data, the following week's data would have jumped through the roof. So I waited. And watched.

Here's the surprise. Last week, from 11/29 through 12/3, USDA tested 9,110 animals. See their test history:

http://www.aphis.usda.gov/lpa/issues/bse_testing/test_results.html

Tiny URL: http://tinyurl.com/5f2qu

The numbers do not lie. They expose USDA's lie. Over 9,000 cows were tested last week by concerned USDA regulators. An increase of fifty-five percent! Had there been no mad cow, the numbers would have been much lower, not 55% higher. More cows were tested because the cow was positive for Mad Cow. USDA lied to America to protect cattlemen.

Only USDA's Department of Enlightenment (Propaganda) lies. Mad Cow is here, and in order to do damage control, insiders are in a panic, testing more animals to prevent the coming plague. Why test more animals? Because USDA confirmed that the original animal tested positive. Had it not, USDA most certainly would have returned to routine testing. They are now in an accelerated testing mode for good reason. It's here...

Mad Cow Testing Timeline

During that ten week period prior to November 18th, 2004, USDA tested 60,660 cows for Mad Cow Disease, or an average of 6,066 per week, or an average of 867 cows per day.

Had the original cow tested negative, USDA would have shifted their testing procedures into neutral, or into a lower gear. Instead, they now have their accelerator to the floor in the highest gear in their history. That's because they know the truth, and it's panic time at USDA. Now that the truth be known, do not expect future numbers to be true. They will fudge their future results. This time atound they were caught with their pants down. How can you be sure? Do not drink the milk. Do not eat the meat.

Bottom line: After lying to America, USDA increased their testing from 839 cows per day to 1301 cows per day, an increase of 55%! Such an increase reflects extremely concerned bureaucrats. The numbers do not lie.

Use a 25-35 Watt pencil-type iron at all times on modern electronics.
Soldering guns are almost always a bad idea.

Unregulated corporations have a tendency to become monsters.
Corporate owned media is generally pretty lame, especially concerning political-economic coverage.  What's best for the people is usually against the best interests of a megacorp.  That's why I try to spread a little sanity everywhere I go.

The last thing the current administration wants is a healthy and diverse media landscape.  To that extent my OT postings are less OT than they may first appear.

Ability to listen to shortwave radio is one of the things totalitarians restrict.

!0 years ago I called the FCC filed office, found out who was "responsable" and started trying to contact them. Repated voice mails, emails and regular snail mails did nothing but raise my blood preasure.
I never got a response  from the clown.
While I was wsting time and energy a cold snap, 10F hit, and the damn bulb blew, like BANG, in less then an hour. I tried to carry on, but when I told the field engineer the noise had qui, he got very uncooperative. Told me there was no longer a problem and they (FCC) had real work to do.
I even contacted the local US attourny and got a royal run around.
At about the same time we had several fools in the central KY area using modified crossband ham transcievers to crossband state police comms into county PD freqs.
Even the police couldn't get any action fromt he FCC.
Now a nother local clow was running about 1.5KW(yea KW!) on and around 27MHz. He was causing severe TVI and when the TV stations complained, the FCC showed up 2 days later.
Follow the money.
We had troubl ewith local cable TV company running a leaky system.
Thye ignored all complaints, and the FCC promised to get back with the local ham club.
Yea, sure.
The cable company runs several CW carriers to set the system gain and maintain EQ. On was around 52MHz. At my suggestion some of the local hams started a CW net on 52MHz. Drove the AGC amps nuts. They had to tighten thier system up to stay in business. At least the FCC now requires all cable comapies to monitor and log their leakage profile. The cable companies found it a good way to catch those who steal cable.

They plot the leakage from every house in the system from a hour fly over.
The FCC only gets invovlved when money is at risk.
This was under El Jeffe Clinton.
But a BB gun is much quiter...less likely to get the LEOs out in force.
Terry

Your best bet is the Philips DC777, after that possibly the Kenwood RZ1 or the Icom R100. All those are no longer made, but ebay is your friend. If you want more limited SW (at a more reasonable price) some of the various flavours of grundig WKC-models are also often offered there. You will find more of them via the advanced search page - select "any country" as the source, and don't be surprised if you pay more in shipping than for the radio.

I've never had any real problem in the last 20+ years getting a problem solved.

Sometimes it took a bit longer than I would have hoped, but it got fixed.

Common peoples are rarely ever the problem or evil. It takes governments and selfish leaders mixed in with a heavy dose of religion and propaganda to motivate people to the dark side.

I once saw a 150 where the owner had badly scratched the front panel trying to pry the knob off.

1. DRM

DRM is a European solution to a European problem. It's a system that a bunch of second tier broadcasters have come up with to use their existing frequencies to continue to be continent wide broadcasters in the face of the various national broadcasters conversions to local digital radio systems.

2. IBOC

The US National Association of Broadcasters method to jam adjacent (out of area) signals and restrict the possible number of stations. On a local NPR station's program about their conversion to IBOC, one of the particpants admitted that the reason that IBOC is being pushed was that other systems could double the number of stations and that was unacceptable to the NAB.

3. Cost

Both of these systems need a digital signal processor with a hundred million instructions per second or so of throughput. That sort of CPU power is going to cost in both money and electrical power consumption. That means about $100 more than an analog radio and a hard time to make a portable that doesn't suck batteries like no tomorrow.

The IBOC promoters seem to think that people only listen to the radio in a car, too. Well, maybe that's the only market that will spend the $$$ for the equipment.

I hear that the IBOC digital CODEC (compression scheme) is lousy for voice. Just what the talk radio people need. ;-)

IBOC and HDTV have the same problem. I'm gonna be damned if I will spend several hundred bucks for a new radio or TV if it's the same crappy programming as I get now.

There's a shop called "Grampy's" in the Benson neighborhood, in Omaha,

Also, saw an old Grundig console, with AM/FM/Shortwave and turntable,

What a beautiful radio - once again, another one passed up.

What a pain in the butt.

DRM (Dickheads Rely on Monopolies)

It's one of those extended translations. It means "suckering the world into another useless product".

I can't wait for the day when I can toss out all of my AM/FM radios to buy a digital radio whose format will only be good for 5 years until they expect you to throw out that radio and buy another. How about those TVs as well. What a hoot that Radio Shack is still selling the tiny handheld TVs, considering that soon they will be totally useless, I guess everyone is going to carry a cable TV converter size box so that they can use their handheld TVs. Not likely.

And for all you radio collectors, those of you with radios from the 1930s that still function. You'll need to start your own low power station to listen to them soon.

Computers have brought us this ludicrous idea of junking what we have every 3 years to buy a faster machine. You can't even order one without improvements in speed occurring while you wait for the delivery of your now antiquated machine.

Bill Gates states that DVDs will be antiquated within 10 years. Throw them all away and buy the new system.

Today's products are more interested in obtaining exclusive manufacturing rights than they are in truly improving the service.

Soliloquy.

Already ahead of them on this one.. there's nothing worth tuning in on AM anymore anyway (or even FM for that matter in many cases). Besides, I can run my own AM transmitter without all the sickenening, ear-pounding processing used in commercial stations these days. Those old radios had a lot better fidelity than any of the new ones, why not use a signal source that can take advantage of it instead of a sickeningly narrow 5KHz bandwidth with the modulation processed to have a whole 6 dB dynamic range??

I've restored a number of radios, and without getting too deep (It's almost dinnertime, and I'm about to run off), there are two ways to go in the world of restorations:  The first is complete OEM parts, but when you're talking about wax caps and multi section electrolytics which had a lifespan of perhaps 20 years, coupled with the rarity of OEM parts, it wouldn't cost altogether very much to restore the unit.  At the very most, I'd budget $1,000 for such a project.

As to the second part of your question, you may very well not expect to get a thousand dollars more (to pay for your restoration).
Radios are really fickle eBay (and auction) items, and the best answer I can give you (with a few exceptions, i.e., Catalins, the old Scotts, and so forth), the price we saw this Zenith go for is really very incredible.  The best answer I can give to answer your second question is, "However much you can get for it."
Not offered in a mocking tone, but it's hard to get a very solid idea of what any given set would be "worth."

BINGO!

Sorry, I somehow completely skipped over that sentence (premature Alzheimer's, I'm sure).

You hit the ball out of the park. I'd end the following words to the end of your sentence: "Especially with so many outstanding radios in this world."

The R-390 (non-a) is an example of "hollow state" engineering at its very best. The aesthetic appeal is not "there" for some collectors, but it definitely gets me jazzed up. I guess that collecting comes down to "what strikes my fancy?" -- and that is the greatest determining factor (price-wise).

I'm curious: Is there a group on yahoo (or anywhere else) for people interested in the Lowe line of receivers? I checked on Yahoo and didn't see one.

Unregulated ANYTHING has a tendency to become a monster. I'm reminded of the early 20th century when the progressives were in the lead and they threw a lot of restrictions on corporations but left unions unregulated. Only after the mob took over the big unions did they realize what a bad idea it was.

So you post offtopic stuff in OTHER groups too? Do you waste as much bandwidth there as you do here? Anyway, yeah corporate owned media is only focused on profits, which means that the news division is turned into a profit center, and what draws in the advertising bucks is ENTERTAINMENT, not news, so news becomes entertainment, with as little depth as a Reality TV show.

You COULD waste less bandwidth by just posting links and let people go to the link if they so choose instead of downloading a big long post.

True, so go listen to it. You could post what stations agree most with your viewpoint, at least that would be a LITTLE on topic.

I've been having severe interference all over 49m for months. (changing the subject a little bit) It's a steady hum. I'm not sure what it is.

It's 31m in general. I've noticed that Radio Havana on 9820 has been subject to such deep fading that it's almost impossible to make out what they're saying. 6000 too, but 9820 is really bad. The BBC's 9525 frequency does it as well, although their signal doesn't usually have the severe ups and downs that Cuba does.

The BBC may be liberal, but I've never heard of them reporting outright

| The BBC may be liberal, but I've never heard of them reporting outright
| lies as facts like CBS does.

I'm much more likely to give the BBC a "pass" -- just for that reason.
Their website is a real news resource, but still as Euroliberal as so many others.

My only beef with the BBC is its lack of focus on Britain, for want of being a strong (the strongest?) media / business "player" in that part of the world.

Does the street light make a loud buzz from your radio every time it re-lights or is it a continuous noise? Do you hear the street light noise only at night or daytime too?

Medium Wave? Why the off topic post? Let's keep it to politics and Bush bashing, ok?

I'm sure you've read these letters asking you to send $1 to six different addresses. Putting your home address or mailing address on the internet can be risky, but through PayPal all you have to provide is your email address. It's safe and easy. Just go to www.paypal.com and set up your FREE account! No credit card is needed. I am not a gullible person and have never trusted things like this, but I gave it a try. Hey it's only $6. I figured at least 6 people would respond out of the millions of people that use the internet. You should give it a try too! You have nothing to lose, and thousands to gain! Read on for the letter that I found (of course, I added my PayPal e-mail on #6)...

IT WORKS!!! BUT YOU HAVE TO FOLLOW IT TO THE LETTER FOR IT TO WORK!!!!
A little while back, I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands of dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, "Yeah, right, this must be some kind of scam" but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept reading. Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 though PayPal to each of the emails stated in the article. You then place your own email address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200 news groups. (There are thousands) No catch. That was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured what have I got to lose except $6.00, right? Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a little worried about the legal aspects of it. It follows the same regulations as the "mailed chain letters, which according to the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) is indeed legal! Then I invested the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!? Within 7 days, I started getting money in my PayPal account! I was shocked! I figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my first week, I made about $20.00. By the end second week I had made a total over $1,200.00!!! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 and it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $36,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly. It's Certainly worth $6.00. I have spent more than that on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works? Also, make sure you print a copy of this article now, so that you can get the information off of it as you need it.

REQUIREMENTS: You must have a confirmed PayPal account. If you do not have a PayPal account you can go to www.paypal.com and follow the instructions to set up a free account. In order to place the initial $6 into your account, you will have to confirm your bank account with PayPal (which may take a few days). PayPal is 100% secure and is used my millions of people world wide. Confirming a www.paypal.com account simply means (1) PayPal will first ask you to confirm the email you used to sign up your PayPal account by sending you an email with a link for you to click to that email. As soon as you click that link your email is confirmed. (2) PayPal will then make two small deposits into your bank account if you set up your PayPal account with a checking or savings bank account. Or PayPal will make two small deposits to your credit card if you set up your PayPal account with your credit card. Then after a few days (it takes up to a few days for these deposits to appear in your bank account or on your credit card statement) then after a few days you go back to the www.paypal.com website and sign in. Then you click where it says this account is not yet confirmed. A screen will pop up that gives you 2 boxes to fill in. You then enter the numbers of the 2 small deposit amounts (two separate 2 digit numbers) that were deposited to your bank account or credit card. Now you have a working and confirmed PayPal account and can receive payments.

[STEP 1]
Send, though PayPal, $1.00 to each email on the below list. Make the subject of the payment "Email List" and in the comments, write "PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR EMAIL LIST." What you are doing is creating a service by this - and best of all you are not giving your address to anyone you do not know. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL!! YOU ARE CREATING A SERVICE. Here are the latest PayPal e-mails on the e-mail lists:

#1)brittany...@excite.com

#2) mth...@renc.igs.net

#3) Mishav...@aol.com

#4) nike31...@aol.com

#5) careent...@hotmail.com

#6) jjrvn...@hotmail.com

www.paypal.com

[STEP 2]
Now take the #1) email off the list that you see above, move the other addresses up one (6 becomes 5 &amp; 5 becomes 4, etc) the put YOUR email address (the one used in your PayPal account) as #6) on the list. MAKE SURE THE EMAIL YOU SUPPLY IS EXACTLY AS IT APPEARS IN YOUR PAYPAL ACCOUNT

[STEP 3]
Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at least 200 newsgroups, message boards, etc. (I think there are close to 32,000 groups) All you need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you make - as well as everyone else on the list! In this situation your job is to let as many people see this letter as possible. So they will make you and me reach!!!! You can even start posting the moment your email is confirmed. Payments will still appear in your PayPal account even while your bank account is being confirmed.

DIRECTIONS ON HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS/MESSAGE BOARDS.

[Step 1]
You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your CURSOR at the beginning of this letter and drag your CURSOR to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into your computer's temporary memory.

[Step 2]
Open a blank Notepad file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'Edit' menu select 'Paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your email to the list.

[Step 3]
Save your new Notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different sittings, you'll always have this file to go back to.

[Step 4]
Use Netscape or Internet Explorer and try searching for various newsgroups, on-line forums, message boards, bulletin boards, chat sites, discussions, discussion groups, online communities, etc. EXAMPLE: go to any search engine like yahoo.com, google.com, altavista.com, excite.com, then search with subjects like "millionaire message board" or "money making message board" or "opportunity message board" or "money making discussions" or "business bulletin board" or "money making forum" etc. You will find thousands and thousands of message boards. Click them one by one then you will find the option to post a new message.

[Step 5]
Visit these message boards and post this article as a new message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting 'Paste' from the 'Edit' menu. Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that everyone sees as they scroll thru the list of postings in a particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your first one! Congratulations! THAT'S IT!! All you have to do is jump to different newsgroups and post away. After you get the hang of it, it will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup! REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS AND/OR MESSAGE BOARDS YOU POST IN, THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!! BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200 That's it! You will begin receiving money within days! JUST MAKE SURE THE EMAIL YOU SUPPLY IS EXACTLY AS IT APPEARS ON PAYPAL.

Have fun!

There's a Yahoo group for the HF-150 but not the other models.

I've thought about starting a group for the HF-250/250E for a while. What receiver do you have?

Bob

Yes, I listened to some of the Amsterdam forum and they were talking about web Blog's.

I don't think its a problem with RRS either.

Thank god that all liberals don't think like Green but I do think I have it right. If you were a far to left liberal instead of "slightly on the liberal side" you would be thinking same as Mr. Green.

Criticism works for the good when it is constructive. There was nothing constructive in Mr. Greens monolog. You can't go around publicly bad mouthing peoples intent to provide charity to others facing disaster.

Our intent is an expression of our will. Charity is giving, which by definition requires one to relinquish control over goods. I don't know what one can do other than give what they perceive as needed and to require them to be responsible for what other people do with those goods is nonsensical. It's just like anything else in life. You do what you think is best, take your best shot and let things fall where they may.

Big difference between "plays down" and "covers up".

Common people don't have power. It's power that corrupts.

Darren,
The 'utilities' he was likely referring to are 'utility stations' such as military, aeronautical & Coast Guard.  They operate on HF and mostly use USB.

Need at least a back case piece for this radio, but a whole dead radio would be best, as I also could use the attenuator button. The e-mail's good, just put the subject line in so I notice it among the Spam.

AMIN,
You will NEVER Convince a RL Drake R8B Receiver Owner that an  Eton 'Elite' E1 Receiver with XM satellite Radio is as-good-as a "R8B" [.]
- - - And I Did NOT and Would NOT Make That Claim.
I am simply suggesting the it should be as-good-as the Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium; and just 'possibly' a little better.  Plus it will be a Real 'portable' AM/FM Shortwave Radio with the capabilities of the Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium; and that ain't bad.
The Proof will be in the Radio Listening Experience !
For Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium "Big Sound" Quality just add a Set (2S+1B) of Self Powered Computer Stereo Speakers with a center Bass Sub-Woofer and individual

Hi there,

I'm still doubt that E1XM uses the same 1st mixer and oscillator as Sat800. This is due to the fact that the lowest frequency able to be dialled-in is 100Hz in both radios - this implies that they are subject to the same phase noise level.
-R- There is more to a Radio's Circuity that will impact its Sensetivity and RF Noise Levels then simply the 1st Mixer/Osc and the fact that it uses a PPL Circuit Design.

If Drake designs E1XM to be better than Sat800 (in this respect), then where will the R8B stand? Does Drake want the R8B to be killed by E1XM ?
-R- See the Top Most Reply.
? Anyway, where can we get the E1XM "block diagram" ?
-R- Well you can expect that ETON will not provide you with one.  Most likely some?one will find a 'copy' of what ever name and model number is given to the Tecsun
'labeled' E1XM that will be for sale in China (PRC).
Best regards,
Amin

1700 memories, and likely 5-kHz tuning steps...
it should be a winner.

I'm just about to receive an HF-150E. I got it because I wanted something relatively small and portable, with good build quality, that would deliver more in the way of performance than the high end portables.

Apparently not even Sinclair Broadcasting cannot totally swallow Williams. The Bush White House is not responsible for funds paid by the Dept. of Education to a commentator?

The Mayor of New York recently arranged to have the somewhat independent Board of Education terminated and made into a City department so he could have power and BE HELD RESPONSIBLE for the schools. A head of government is held responsible for the actions of departments of government.

If you have something like the USPS or the Federal Reserve Board or the BBC which is not under the direct control of the government in power then that's a different story.

By the way, wasn't there a big shtunk in Canada over government-funded propaganda? Of course, the Congressional fear of Government-funded internal propaganda is why the VOA, under its charter, can't send a schedule to Des Moines and why it needed a law to allow that VOA film about JFK to be seen in the U.S.

Sinclair Investigates Commentator Williams

Tue Jan 11, 2005 03:49 AM ET

By Andrew Wallenstein

LOS ANGELES (Hollywood Reporter) - Television station owner Sinclair Broadcast Group is conducting an internal inquiry into an appearance made on one of its news programs by political pundit Armstrong Williams.

Williams admitted last week he received more than $240,000 from the Department of Education to promote its No Child Left Behind initiative, a relationship he did not disclose to networks where he had discussed the subject, including CNN, as well as in his newspaper column syndicated by Tribune Media Services. Tribune has since terminated his column.

Barry Faber, general counsel for Sinclair, a station group with holdings in 39 U.S. markets, disclosed that Williams was under contract last year as an independent consultant to the company and is believed to have interviewed Education Secretary Rod Paige on a Sinclair-produced nightly news program, "News Central," about No Child Left Behind. But he asserted that Sinclair had no knowledge of Williams' relationship with the Education Department.

"Our news department is reviewing whether there was anything inappropriate that aired on our station," said Faber, who added that the contract with Williams has since expired. He could not specify the date of Williams' interview with Paige.

Hello friends years ago SWL's used to swap copies of their SWL cards with each other.
I for one always enjoyed it.  If there are any of you who also have a personal SWL card and want to swap pls email me (WDX9KHY @aol.com)  It might be fun to resurrect what was a good custom and tradition

I have an Icom R71a which I bought new in 1990.

Its performance is degraded and I wish to restore it back to service, so that I may once again use it on a daily basis.

Here is what I have done for repairs to date

a) correct cold / open solder joint on bridge rectifier in power supply to correct intermittent loss of power and noise problems

b) replace electrolytic capacitors with tantalum caps in dc to dc converter stage of display board (replaced on spec to help reduce noise)

c) replace C1, C7, C11 on RF board to regain lost sensitivity (must have had high RF power hit at some point)

I still experience noise in medium wave band. The noise will build to a point that there is complete loss of signal below about 2.5khz with the radio going silent. At times, the signal returns after brief interruption. Tuning up to higher frequency and then back down sometimes restores signal.

Also, years ago, local AM stations would cause full deflection of S meter. This no longer occurs and there is poor DX reception in MW band.

Any suggestions what to look at next for cause of fault?

I have read posts that some owners have replaced capacitors on PLL board. Which ones? What problems does this correct?

Thanks!

Only one more day of this mess then I can go home.

Been trapped down south for a week, glad I bought the four wheeler down, I've been in a foot of water many times this week.

Hung out in the gym four hours at a time for something to do.

I've been warm and dry just stuck down here (Ontario, Ca.) The roads are full of pot holes and some sink holes. Most city services are still working well, the trash truck just came by.

It's a shame that the cities give permits for houses on the side of these hills in the first place. Our tax money is spent saving these house and the people in them and the land would have not slide if it didn't have the weight of the house, pool and streets.

Gee, what about those book authors 60 Minutes and other CBS shows had on trying to bash President Bush before they got busted and revealed that the publisher was owned by Viacom, CBS's parent company?

Can you say infomercial?

The plug won't be pulled on analog television any time soon.  Too many people own analog televisions, and too few people have migrated to digital broadcasts to warrant the cutover yet.  In other words, too many consituents for Congressmen would call up and complain for the FCC to follow through on the original transition plan.

Father Dearest

Note: This January 11, 2005 BuzzFlash Editorial marks the eleventh in 20 consecutive editorials BuzzFlash will be publishing through January 20th.

A BUZZFLASH EDITORIAL

At the center of a number of theories surrounding the blind loyalty to Bush among some 90% of Republicans is that he represents the father figure for the nation. A patriarchal hierarchy reveres the father no matter what errors he makes, because he -- well -- sits at the head of the table and is the "leader" of the family.

So the father could go out on a bender and sleep with a couple of tarts, go to church and ask repentance, and all is forgiven because he is the father, the provider, the protector of the family.

Perhaps that's why Andrew Card, Bush's Chief of Staff, told a group of Bush Maine supporters last summer that George regards the citizens of America as 10-year-olds (we are not making this up) who need to be led. The irony that Bush may be the 10-year-old defying the law of majority rule that comes with democracy did not go unnoticed by BuzzFlash.

If you're not into the patriarchy model, you just see Bush's worldview as arrogant, elitist, and toxic. This is one father figure who is so bumbling that he wears the word "failure" out. Indeed, the only thing he is successful at is failing -- and, of course, lying about his failures.

That's some father figure. It reminds us of the male counterpart of "Mommy Dearest." It's the "Godfather" if Fredo ended up running the Corleone crime family instead of Michael.

In Bush's patriarchal hierarchy, a Christian God has chosen him to lead America onto "a righteous path." Bush's primary mission was not to be elected. He has told staffers, as documented in many articles, that he believes that the almighty picked him as president and to lead the crusade against terrorism. It wasn't an election in 2000, according to George; it was divine intervention.

There are two kinds of people in the world, the old saw goes: people who believe there are two kinds of people, and the rest of us. George W. Bush falls into the first category. Let's try this theory out:

Islam: bad. Christianity: good.
Republicans: good. Democrats: bad.
Rich people: good. Poor people: bad.

Are you getting the picture now?

That's our national Daddy: a simple-minded elitist who believes that he is divinely inspired.

His icon is everywhere now, even, as Paul Krugman has pointed out, including multiple photos of "our father figure" in the United States budget. (No presidential photos have ever appeared before in the budget.) Like Mao or Castro or Stalin, his propagandists are branding him as the "mighty leader" fighting to "protect the homeland." Large billboards are already popping up with Bush's photo and the simple title, "Our Leader." No doubt, statues and marble busts will soon be springing up around the nation of "our president leading the valiant struggle against the terrorist enemies who hate freedom."

Bush almost isn't a real person anymore. He is a branded image.

The White House markets Bush like a product, and the press treats him as if he were advertising copy.

But, truth be told, he is just a chronic failure in three thousand-dollar suits.

What does a nation do when its father figure turns out to be an inept, inflexible child who doesn't understand his limitations?

George W. Bush sure is bringing a lot of people back to religion.

Prayer may be all that's left after he's done dismantling our Constitution and our infrastructure as a national community, not to mention bankrupting our nation and conducting an unnecessary war that has resulted in the deaths of tens of thousands of people and the radicalization of more terrorists.

Pray for "your President," our soldiers are told.

Pray for America to survive this president.

You can hear it on the digital cable/satellite/INTERNET STREAM network illegal MP3's.

BBC7 has it both - well, live ain't exactly the word for half-century

Invasion of the Body Snatchers (1956) is a thrilling, disturbing classic science fiction/alien film from veteran producer Walter Wanger. [Wanger had just been released from prison in the early 50s for attempted murder. He had been imprisoned for a short 4-month jail term for the 1951 shooting incident of the lover (MCA agent Jennings Lang) of his unfaithful movie-star wife, Joan Bennett. The incident provided an indirect inspiration for the Billy Wilder movie The Apartment (1960).]

It was originally based upon a three-part serial story written by Jack Finney that appeared in Colliers Magazine in late 1954, and then in 1955 was rendered into an expanded novel, The Body Snatchers. The screenplay, written by Daniel Mainwaring (who also wrote the script for the classic noir Out of the Past (1947)) was aided, according to some sources, with uncredited scriptwriting and dialogue direction by Sam Peckinpah (the great Western director who appears in a bit cameo part as a meter reader).

A quintessential, black and white B-picture, it was precisely-executed and packed with action by director Don Siegel, plus a scary musical score from Carmen Dragon. The subtle, low-budget film (at about $420,000) is very effective in eliciting horror with slow-building tension, even though there are no monsters (just indestructible plant-like pods), minimal special effects, no violence in the take-over of humans, and no deaths. The film had a few preliminary titles: Sleep No More, Better Off Dead, and They Came From Another World before the final choice was made.

Philip Kaufman's adaptation Invasion of the Body Snatchers (1978) with

Donald Sutherland and Brooke Adams (and featuring cameo roles by Kevin McCarthy as a man running on the freeway and Don Siegel as a cabdriver) and set in San Francisco and nearby Mill Valley, with the tagline: "You'll never close your eyes again"
Abel Ferrara's The Body Snatchers (1994) - the book's original title - with Gabrielle Anwar, Meg Tilly and Forrest Whittaker, and set on a Southern military base
The original film would become more and more revered and distinctive as time passed.

The theme of the cautionary, politicized film was open to varying interpretations, including paranoia toward the spread of a harmful ideology such as socialistic Communism, or the sweeping mass hysteria of McCarthyism in the 1950s and blacklisting of Hollywood, the spread of an unknown malignancy or virulent germ (read fear of annihilation by 'nuclear war'), or the numbing of our individuality and emotional psyches through conformity and group-think. Yet its main theme was the alien (read 'Communist') dehumanization and take-over of an entire community by large seed pods (found in basements, automobile trunks, a greenhouse, and on a pool table) that replicated and replaced human beings. And it told of the heroic struggle of one helpless but determined man of conscience, a small-town doctor (McCarthy), to vainly combat and quell the deadly, indestructible threat.

This relentlessly haunting film received no Academy Award nominations. It was originally released at 80 minutes, and then reissued at 76 minutes in 1979. The prologue and its unconvincing matching epilogue were not in the original shooting of the film and were later tacked on. (The studio-imposed footage was removed in the 1979 re-issue.) Allied Artists wanted to soften the paranoia of the original and provide a more hopeful ending with the framing device. Executives at the studio also forced Wanger to release the film in SuperScope - an anamorphic widescreen process that altered the original 1.33:1 ratio that the cinematographer had used.

ADDITIONAL PROLOGUE:

In the exciting opening prologue with extended narration, dishevelled physician Dr. Miles Bennell (Kevin McCarthy), distraught and seeming to be psychotic and mad about alien invaders, shouts to an unbelieving group of nurses, interns, psychiatrists (including Whit Bissel as Dr. Hill), and doctors (including Richard Deacon as Dr. Harvey Bassett) in the emergency room of the city's Emergency Hospital where he has been brought by a police car, that seed pods are taking over the planet:

Doctor, will you tell these fools? I'm not crazy. Make them listen to

General practitioner Dr. Miles Bennell explains, in a series of flashbacks from a few days earlier, the terrifying take-over of the town of Santa Mira, California. [Note: The fictitious town was first planned to be modeled after Mill Valley - a town in the Bay Area north of San Francisco. But then the town of Sierra Madre was chosen for filming, just east of Pasadena in the greater Los Angeles area.]

This gets at one of the worries I have about the E1. People who are interested in satellite radio can find satellite receivers much cheaper than the E1; and people who are interested in AM/FM can likewise find cheaper receivers. Now, my sense, and I stress that this is my impression and not the result of any sort of research, is that most people who are interested in satellite radio won't be attracted to the AM/FM capabilities of this receiver, and consequently they'll pass it over in favor of a less expensive satellite receiver. Likewise, SWLers will pass over the E1 because there are superior tabletop sets (Icom R-75, Palstar R30) in the SAME PRICE RANGE as the E1. Furthermore, the E1 will not have the benefit of the Grundig name.

If I worked for Eton, this is what I'd be worried about...well, aside from whatever mechanical defects might emerge in the first production run. (I'm extremely curious to find out what the build quality is like on the E1. I hope it's built like a tank, but I can't help but worry.)

Goodluck on the license and the SW in the car.
The license will be the easy part.
I have all but given up on trying to de-noise my 1991 Civic.
Between the CPU/ECM  and the igniton system I have the best noise generator I ever owned. It is very usefull for testing the effectivness of "noise blankers".

I hate to beat a dead horse, but have you called your electrical service provider?

Who is your electrical service provider?

What is their telephone number?, and do they have a 800 number?

An email address?

I'm willing to try to jump in here to give you a hand, as I know what electrical interference can do to reception on shortwave.

Sears "Craftsman" model 82363 has AC amperage ranges of 2m, 200m and 20amps AC.  About $65.00.  I'm sure there are others, too.

Make sure you have a good impedence match to your receiver, make sure you have a good solid outdoor ground from said receiver, and try to find out by process of elimination what in or around your home is generating extraneous noise - shut if off while listening, if that's feasable.

All of that may/might help some, but not as much as you are hoping for.
Longwire antennas will inherently pick up noise, period.  Loops are much quieter, but overall don't have the same signal pulling ability.

TouchStone Energy, formerly RECC.
But the damn light went out a few minutes ago with a loud SPLAT that was loud inside our house.
Ah, listen to the quite!
Had to work late today running video tape, so I didn't get a cahnce to check this group during my missed afternnon break.
I am very glad it went on and died because I intend to use the upcoming three day weekend to test an idea I have for a "better" feedline.
"Big Time TV" cameras use Triax.
Similar to Coax, but there are 2 isolated shields. At work we had a MAJOR cleanup and I have about 80' of slightly used Triax.
(I think Triax is a registered trade mark).
I suspect that some noise is creeping back up my feedline to get into the antenna. I have placed enough feritte split cores on my equipment to pose a hazard to the compasses in overhead aircraft! But I still have a few birdies that vanish when I kill my PC. If this works I will try to write it up.
"Noise ingress", BT TV's term, is a major problem for high end studio and field TV cameras. Triax is very good at surpressing ingress.
Of course the temps are going to be about 4F,
but antennas allways work better if you suffer errecting them!

BTW I have friends who used to work in a repair shop  and they salvaged all of the supresion cores from dead equipment. I have a "whole bunch".
The more you add the better the results.
I have been tempted a time or two to pull the feritte rod frm my McKay DA5 MW loop, it has an ~1/8" hole lengthwise and it is about 10" long. But tempted as I am,I have resisted. So far.
At least the bug zappers are quite this time of year.
Next on my insane noise reduction list is to add filtering at every AC outlet and across every light switch.  I have found that a 0.1Ceramic cap, with a 1 Ohm carbon film resistor in seires will quiten the mains nicely. My insurance company and the local fire department insist the caps be placed in a "sturdy" metal box. I plan on using the micro Altoid tins, spot soldered, protected by fiberglass tubing, with the leads protected by flame proof heat shrink.
The 1 Ohm resistor makes a dandy fuse. I hope to add feritte  cores as I go.
Everyone already knew I was crazy, right?

Best choice you could have made Steve. Make sure you check out the battery box for corrosion. Users tend to put in alkaline batteries and then plug in the AC adapter- this attempts to charge the alkalines, causing them to leak.
I have had 3 150's- only my current model has a pristine battery box.

Not HAARP.  XM and Sirius paying the FCC.  The satilite radio market shut down BBC to the western hemisphere.  My suggestion is to keep broadcasting! SW and DX have been here long before these guys showed up and SW and DX will still be here!

Keep broadcasting.  Just don't air any of that religious stuff.  That is kinda the main reason SW never caught on.  50 stations of religous broadcasting and not one station plays Stairway to Heaven.

Sorry Art,
There is no FWD/REV switch.  That is what the SWR side of the meter is for.  There is no need to reverse the meter and sense the reflected power.

But as far as it being for CB/HAM, other folks had the same idea.  And it will not be accuarate up in the airband.

As an added note, I have pulled the back off and there is a straight rod between the in and the out so-239s.  Running parrallel are two more rods used for sensing.  Wires run from the sensing rods to the pot in the middle.  Actually it is a double pot.  So might it be some sort of attenuator or ballence....but I would guess that should be a cap....I dunno....that is why I asked you guys.

Again thanks Art for taking a stab at it...
Chris

In another post cuhulin mentions always having a transistor radio with him when he was in the US Army. That reminds me of something that happened to me when I lived in San Francisco 10 years ago. I was browsing the junk for sale at one of the city's sidewalk garage sales, where homeless people sell stuff fished out of dumpsters in order to eat or buy some dope. One guy had a TO 7000 in reasonably good shape. He wanted $20, which I didn't have. He said that he had lugged it through his entire tour of duty in Vietnam and that it had kept him connected to home. He didn't want to sell it since it had a lot of sentimental value to him but he needed to eat. I told him I would get the $20 later that day and come back tomorrow and if he still had it I would buy it. I came back the next day at the same time with the $20 but he was nowhere to be found. I still wish I would have had the money to buy it off him right then and there. Can you imagine hauling a TO through the jungles of Nam for a year, what with all those soldiers went through? And then having to sell it-your last real possession-on some godforsaken street corner in San Francisco for $20 in order to eat that night? (Another time, I DID buy some bum's Silvertone AM transistor radio for $4. It had a hinged plate that flipped up to reveal the dial and thumbwheels. Real neat little radio. I don't have it anymore, though.)

Try Ebay. He'll be rolling in dough. He just needs to remember to put the initial bid on that 7600 at $9.99 so it will sell for $300...

Perhaps, with all the collections being taken up for our brave troops who have been railroaded into another hopeless war, we could take up a collection of portable shortwave radios to send over to Iraq so the soldiers would have something else to listen to besides AFRTS.

I think I read somewhere that an effort to send radios to troops is already underway. I'll have to look into that.

AAFES (PX/BX) doesn't seem to be too interested in selling SW radios. I've seen three models since I've been over here (Korea), one I'm sure was an accident (a JVC boombox that had a SW band on it), then there's the Sony SWF-35, and the little jWin pocket sized one. And out of all of those, I've seen exactly 15 pieces total in all the AAFES stores in country.

Most of the troops are young-in their 20s-and from poorer households.
Unless somebody in the family is into SWL, I doubt that the vast majority of them know what shortwave is. The AFRTS SW stations that we in this group listen to are simply feeders-they're picked up by the comms units and rebroadcast on AM and/or FM to the troops. I bet it gets very lonely being in a foreign country where none of the civilians speak your language or even like you, and the only thing to listen to in English is AFRTS. Sure, they have DVDs sent from home, but DVDs can't keep you informed about what is happening outside Iraq from a perspective other than that of the US military, or offer the wide range of programming that SW does.

Personally, I don't care for the auction format. I know, many are the worshippers at the "alter of ebay". I find amazon to be  compatible with my webtv. I'm not a commerce zealot either. I guess, either way, these are sources to move unwanted stuff. Darren

ships at sea. All the terrestrial AFN stations are now satellite fed from various sources with someone sitting at a mixer at the local outlet (or, in the case of AFN-Korea, at Yongsan, feeding all the outlying outlets) switching feeds according to a local programming schedule.  All the AFN radio feeds are available in Asia and Europe now via DTS satellite feeds (in stereo, no less).

I tuned in to 9525 at 0300 January 12 to hear the news on the BBC, and all I heard was an IS followed by Spanish. They clearly said "BBC Noticias" so I know it was the BBC, but I thought this frequency and time was in English, at least it usually is. What's going on? I know this freq is targeted at Mexico, did they finally decide that people in Mexico indeed speak Spanish instead of English and adjust their programming accordingly? ;)

I haven't seen one of those old Simpsons in years!  Damned good meter, but given the age and capabilities of that one, I think $50 is an optimistically high starting bid, unless you're a collector to whom it's a "must have".  I have a soft spot for analog meters (still have one, use it occasionally, too) but for a U.S Grant, you can buy a much more widely capable and accurate meter today.

Insurance companies often demand that the grass be kept quite short due to wildfire risks.  Unfortunately this makes it much easier for the ground to be disrupted from heavy raings.

Ahh the joys of living in California.  Just finished pumping out more water from under my house - in a few hours more will seep in and the pump will have to be run again.  Compared to many folks my water issue is a nothing.  What really frosted my was how bad radio reception has been this past week, a real increase in atmospheric noise.  Things got real quiet when I disconnected the antennas (heard we might get lightning so it seemed the prudent thing to do).

Now we're down to just some light and intermittent drizzle, our ground rods have moist soil and the idiots who didn't figure out how to kill themselves by playing in the desert washes & flood channels will have to wait for fire season and see if they can manage to torch themselves via campfire in the midst of dry brush.  At least we didn't have a major earthquake during the rains - all that saturated soil, can you say liquifaction??

Yes..but...

The super high input impedance of the new digital meters can actually be a drawback in some cases. You can get voltage readings from wires that have no right to be carrying any current. A case in point was some trouble shooting for a friend. There was a lighting circuit out in a basement parking lot. We started measuring things, and a lot of the wires were reading 7 volts, 9 volts, etc..

This was with a digital meter. It didn't make sense. We tried a junky pocket size 2K ohm/volt analog and got ZERO volts on the same wires. The lack of a slight load using the digital meter was showing us the induced voltage from other circuits running through the same conduit. As soon as the meter load was reduced to a few thousand ohms and a bit of current could flow, , the voltage basically disappeared.

In this case, the antique analog meter was the better tool to use. An old teacher once said that any meter with less than *20*k ohm/volt was junk. In most cases he was right. Two megohm/volt or higher was something reserved for the expensive VTVM instruments that normal people couldn't afford.

You seem to have the deluxe version with 2 meters but without FWD/REV switch.
While transmitting, use pot to adjust power meter to full scale, then read SWR on other meter.

I was checking the inside of my Frg-7 and found some dust on the PCB and components. I would like to clean it off with something.

Can anyone please recommend something? Is plain spray on contact cleaner safe to use on the components too?

Thanks
Lucky

Go for the icom R75....please don't waist your money on a yaesu VR5000 they are the biggest load of S? i have ever owned.
when they were released i paid �700+ for one of them with the DSP unit installed...all i will say is i only owned it for just six months and sold it on at a loss.........
i then went out and paid almost 3k for another as i am one who only wants the best and after buying the VR5000 i know why i am the way i am....short wave radio magazine run an article on the VR5000 and to be honest they even said they are not worth buying.
in my opinion i can not understand yaesu why bring out a receiver that is so bad well next to useless... they yaesu have a good reputation so why bring out such a crap receiver... i will look in my old copies of short wave magazines and if i can find the review i will post it hear for you...

Hi all

Cam someone please help me with a query I have about an old crystal set I used to own.

When I first came to live in Melbourne (1970s) my parents purchased for me a small crystal set.at a local, now long gone, toy store. As I recall the set was manufactured in England although I may be wrong on this point.

It was housed in a small plastic box (red?) and from memory was about 2 inches long and maybe an inch wide and high.

Inside the box was a small wound coil (about 1/4" diameter) around a thin cardboard tube. There was a ferrite rod inside this which could be slid back and forth within the tube by means of a small rod that stuck out of the end of the ferte rod and protruded from the end of the box. This was used for tuning stations. There was also a piece of wire coming from the box with an alligator clip on the end. This was the antenna and by attaching it to a long piece of wire one could receive stations. There was also another piece of twin wire protruduing from the box which went to a crystal earpiece so that you could listen to stations.

Aside from this I think there were only two other components - a diode and a capacitor as I recall which formed the crystal set circuit. Unfortunately the set is now lost after so many years.

This was my first introduction to radio and despite moving on to bigger radios and getting my ham license, this example of a crystal set has always stuck in my mind as being a particularly simple but efficient example of electrical engineering. I now have a young son of my own and would like very much to buy one of these sets.

Does anyone know who manufactured these sets and whether they are still available to be purchased?

cheers Peter VK3PB

Mine is more than adequate on the h.f. bands.  It "hears" everything my R-75, FRG7000, 7700, 8800, and Sat-800 can hear.  From what I hear, the earlier versions were plagued with issues.  Personally, I couldn't be happier with mine.  Sorry to hear you got a lemon...

This is interesting.  Steve, did you manage to hear this one too?

I'm rarely near a radio at that time, but even if I were, those midday
DX blues and yecch noise would probably make it darn near impossible

ML,
HERE IS WHY I THINK THE "ETON E1 RECEIVER WITH XM SATELLITE RADIO WILL BE A BETTER 'BASIC' PRODUCT THAN THE DRAKE SW8 AND GRUNDIG SATELLIT 800 MILLENNIUM RADIO/RECEIVERS :  {What I Think and Why}
Since RL Drake Co. (including Grundig/Eton/Tecsun) have a History of "Lesions Learned" for the Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium and the Drake SW8 Radio/Receivers.  It would be in RL Drakes and the others collective "Best Interests" to make any and all small Fixes that would Reduce Customer Complaints and Improve Initial Customer Satisfaction with their new Radios.  Each Dollar spend doing so usually results in about a Seven Dollar Saving in Repair Maintenance Costs 'after' the Sale of the Product {Radio/Receiver} .

If you had read all the little 'low cost' FIXES that Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium Owners have Reported about in the Grundig Satellit 800 eGroup on YAHOO!   You would know that there are many minor 'parts' improvements that could make the new Eton E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio a "Better" Product {Radio/Receiver} for the Radio Enthusiast.

NOTE : This is a Product {Radio/Receiver} that is Up-Scale-Priced and "Targeted" for the RADIO ENTHUSIAST : Or to be Given as what is usually called an "Executive Gift" . [Money & Image]

I Will Repeat Myself:  [ IMHO ] In order to put the 'basic' Electronics of the Drake SW8 / Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium into a much 'smaller' [Box] as that which is the "Size" of the new Eton E1 Receiver with XM Satellite Radio:  The Design Engineers at RL Drake Co. (USA) and the Manufacturing Process and Testing Engineers at Tecsun GEM China (PRC); would have to BUILD THE RADIO BETTER; or offer an inferior product to the SW8 / GS800M.  All the Companies concerned simply would NOT DO THIS with what will be Their PREMIER "Flag Ship" Product {Radio/Receiver}

and that's what i think ~ RHF

All are WELCOME and "Invited-to-Join" the ETON 'Elite' E1 XM Radio eGroup on YAHOO !

No haven't looked for it yet. I did QSL them back in 1990 on 7203 and received a card and a letter.

It's actually on 11711 kHz, give-or-take a small fraction.

RHF: I hope you're right!! However, I'm not going to spend $500 to become one of the E1's beta testers. Down the road, maybe....

Will Drake be servicing defective E1's and will they be selling the E1 on the Drake website, as they're doing with the Satellit 800?

Please buy the Icom.

At least it (the R-75) holds good re-sale value if you tire of it.

ZAMBIA 4910, 1601-1655, ZNBC Radio 1 Jan 10 'A Mighty Fortress is Our God' hymn by bell choir at tune-in; male announcer with mentions of Zambia at 1603, then female announcer with presumed news items in unid. language. Mentions of Lusaka at 1610, and into another hymn by a bell choir at 1611; followed by 'What A Friend We Have In Jesus' song on organ. Female chorus to woman announcer at 1615, and into soft Afropops music. Mentions of Zambia again at 1630. Good reception half-hour before Lusaka sunset, and 40 minutes after my local sunrise; finally dropping down to poor by 1650. Strong het only noted on 3306. I also checked 4965 for R. Christian Voice, but it was also just a het. ZNBC 4910 also heard on Jan 12, peaking to good at 1620. (Atkins-WA)

My father was telling me recently about how he built capacitors from scratch when he was a boy. He scrounged broken bits of glass and alternated them with pieces of tinfoil from gum wrappers. Together with some wire leads they formed a capacitor for use in homebrew crystal radios. He used the large oatmeal boxes for coil forms, and transducers from old telphone handsets for the earpiece. A galena crystal and safety pin was used for the detector, but I don't know where he came upon the galena.

The modern reproduciton that I have was made by DaMart Company.
I found this web site in Engalnd:
http://www.greatgizmos.co.uk/damert_company_page_1.htm

Rocket Radio  (Reference #D4025)
It receives radio signals without using batteries! In the late 1950's, kids learnt that the magic of radio could be achieved without batteries through an ingenious gizmo known as the Rocket Radio. Now it's back! By attaching the antenna/ground wire and tuning the nose cone, a handful of AM stations can be received and heard through a crystal earphone. An informative booklet will help curious minds understand the science behind radio transmissions and crystal diodes. For ages 8 and up.

The show a blue one, but mine is red.
My sister tore mine up back in 1960.
She bought me one in 2001 for my 50th birthday.
My orignal was blue but I didn't complain.
It works pretty well, but I found a site that has some improvements, but I can't find the $#%^ URL right now. I never got around to making them, after all why complicate something simple that really works. When I find the URL I will post it here as a new post.

I saw at http://www.radiointel.com that Liypn told Russ eBay has stopped allowing the word "Degen" to appear on eBay auctions, due to a complaint by Degen. Not much information other than that.

I went to eBay and checked Liypn's auctions. Sure enough he's selling DE1103s etc. with no mention of "Degen". Then I checked Brochhi's stuff. He's still using the Degen name.

Here's what it says at radiointel.com:

< Ebay Bans The Use Of The Word "Degen" On Auctions
Thanks to Ebay seller Liypn we learn that Ebay as prohibited the use of the word "Degen" on their auction site. This is result of a complaint filed by Degen GmbH Communication with Ebay as unauthorized use of intellectual property rights, copyright, trademark, etc.>

Does anyone know why this happened?

That's interesting. It would appear that that company of course is in Germany and looks as though they have nothing to do with 'Degen' radios per se. So one gets into copyright, trademarks etc.

So it looks like a simple case of a trade name dispute and since eBay does business in Deutscheland perhaps they felt it best to remove it.

The Chinese perhaps are not to good at respecting trade names?

So maybe they'll choose a new name?
I hope it's not like the sewing machine thing.
A US marketing expert went to China to help them get off the ground with selling a new sewing machine.
He asked the company chief what the brand name of the sewing machine would be.
The honcho said "Typical. Typical Sewing Machines."
Trying not to laugh the marketing guy asked,
"Why would you name the brand 'Typical'?"
Without hesitating, the Chinese entrepeneur responded,
"Why not? You have 'Standard' Oil."

I would put forth the 'Dang' trademark.

Then one can say... I've got a Dang 1103...

And someone else could respond... That's cool, but my Dang 1107 is better.

And so it goes.

instantly...
'Why it's right over there on the shelf honey, right where you left it last

I was using a balun wound on an Amidon FT114-43 torroid, on opposite sides. Since then, someone posted impedence_matching_bryant.pdf or similar (was it DxAce?). Anyways, I wound another one with the overlapped method, and I must say, performance seems to be much better, especially between 5000 and 10000 khz. I was able to pull many stations in last night, despite increased solar activity, including many that I had never received before.

So thanks, to whoever posted it. And I can say, from my impressions only, with absolutely no evidence, that the overlapped winding method is better than the opposite-sides method.

The company in Germany is probably searching for "Degen" with www.ebay.de.
Since Brochhi doesn't sell outside of the USA, his items won't show up on www.ebay.de by default, but lipyn's will.

If you run www.degen.com.cn through babelfish.altavista.com, the translation of the name Degen uses in Chinese is "German Vigor."

John,
I have also been considering a Wellbrook loop mainly for noise reduction.
I would be especially interested in your review as you have a decent assortment of wire to compare it to.

I'll be looking for your post!

One advantage of the toroid core is near complete flux linkage- I think if you were able to do instantaneous comparisons, you would see no difference.

Heck, that's nothing. Bush borrows money and re election funds from the communist Chinese. Clinton rents them rooms in the White House for cash.
Perle sells them rocket secrets..The list goes on....

I think you'd be better off getting one commercially first.  Then experiment with it so you can make your own.  It's much less frustrating that way.

Purists insist on using a chunk of galena and a "cat's whisker" for the detector, but you can substitute a plain old 1N34 germanium diode to accomplish the same thing without all that trouble of having to poke around to find a "hot spot" on the chunk of galena.

There are different ways to accomplish tuning.  You can have a variable coil, or a variable capacitor.  Big variable caps can still be found, though not new, and they're easier to work with.  Smaller variable caps can be salvaged from junked transistor radios.

It's been said that "A dollar in the antenna is worth ten in the receiver."  That holds true.  String up as much long wire as you can for your antenna.  And also make sure you have a good earth ground.  That will really help.

After you get all this done, please let us know what you hear!!!!

Here's a froogle search sorted low to high price

<http://froogle.google.com/froogle?num=20&hl=en&lr=&c2coff=1&safe=off&tab=wf&scoring=p&q=rocket+radio+crystal&btnG=Search+Froogle>

$9.95 (plus shipping) seems typical.

Babel is wrong.

The Chinese word for German is "deguo".

Degen can be roughly translated as:

De =  Very good, good performance or quality.
Gen = Vigor

Or in English, Degen "marketing" roughly translates into something like Quality performance and strength.
As in many translations the meaning can be lost in translation.

The old formula (maybe the 14 year old stuff you mention) for CRC contained CFC's (Chlorofluorocarbons), a nasty substance and one which can contaminate thousands of gallons of water with just a drop.  It's also thought to cause cancer.  The new formula doesn't contain CFC's.

I had some alkaline batteries leak recently and called one of the big battery companies (Duracell I think) and they told me to use a 50/50 mix of water and white vinegar.  It worked fairly well for getting the battery leakage out of/off of contacts and the case of the radio.

1) Because money rules over morality.
2) The Chinese need to spend their excess US Dollars.
3) Radio Canada needs money.

Notice that many mainland Communist China TV stations are also available from DishNetwork.
For a subscription fee of course - which goes straight into Das Party's coffers.

Not only that, they have the entire manufacturing capacity of the WORLD

there now, so that they can bring the world to its knees simply by cutting off the spigot. Much like the terrorists could do if they took over Saudi Arabia.

BTW, I thought Voice of Korea was the closest thing to "Radio Communist" there was nowadays. ;)

> Dennis & Judy, be advised that you'll have to have cap mod ICOM's R-75 to get satisfactory agc, audio, & sync performance. Bought Radio Place's last R-75 before they went out of business two years ago, had the cap mods incorporated, & it's been a stellar receiver ever since. Although ICOM gets ripped for lousy audio, those cap mods produce a robust, midrange-centric tonality via external amplification. If you want to go Yaesu, though, get a Century Frog (FRG-100). They don't seem to suffer the bugaboos of FRG's 7000, 7700, or 8800. B.T.W., really miss Lucky Ocean's "Planet" via Radio Australia since the holidays!!!

Yeah, now there's NO ham radio store in Sacramento ever since Radio Place went under. You have to go to the Bay Area if you want to buy any HF gear in person. There's that Chicken Lips place that sells CB equipment to truckers, but other than that there's absolutely NO "alternative radio" stores in northern CA outside of Ham Radio Outlet in Oakland and Sunnyvale-unless they've gone under too. When I was a teenager (early 90s) there were 2 or 3 ham radio stores in Sacramento and Rat Shack had a good selection of SW radios. Now all the ham stores have closed and Rat Shack only sells a couple Grundigs, and you have to know where to look for them in the store. A sad scenario. Looks like SW has really died off since the Cold War ended.

As for Radio Australia, the program head in Melbourne who decided that the station should keep playing cricket and rugby games as the greatest disaster to EVER hit SE Asia was happening should be fired and locked in a padded room since he's clearly insane.

My FRG-8800 has its quirks, but it's still a decent receiver. Just don't leave it plugged in, or else the next power blackout might fry the chips for good.

Doesn't sound like a good basis for making 'Degenerate' desirable, but if you say so...

Running dogg, when you say "N. California location," where is that?
Near SF?

I am near SF (East Bay) and I get scores of seemingly random noises across 5 - 10 MHz.  49m is especially bad for weird unidentifiable QRM.
Some of it sweeps (moves up and down the frequency scale), or changes pitch while maintaiing a single RF.

I get intermod junk from local 50kW MW stations.  Bad in wet weather when the ground improves.

I also get screwy stuff that just comes on and off.  Some of it fades in and out like the HF signals, so some of it may be far away.

Also get the usual streetlight junk, too - that's fixable.

Try to see if they still have weather reports coming out of Kodiak Coast Guard in vanilla RTTY.  I'm pretty sure they would still have FEC-TOR transmissions, if your TU or software can deal with that.

It isn't the XM capability that is running the price up.
Cost of the XM chip to Eton is well under $1.

What I find sickening about the majority of how Americans reason is this:

Would you sentence a person who steals a 100.00 worth of groceries because he is unemployed and has a family to feed to the same amount of jail time as you would someone who robs a bank of $1,000,000 dollars?

Would you sentence a married man who has extramarital sex with a willing female to the same sentence that you would a married man who was a serial killer like the "Green River Strangler?"

If you answered "no" to both of the above, then why are most Americans so willing to allow "CBS News" to be punished... for a trivial mistake, and yet they worship George Bush who despite all the expert advice he received from weapons inspectors, CIA, and other people rushed this country in to an unnecessary massacre.

Even now after he has admitted that there are no weapons of mass destruction in Iraq, he still is to arrogant to admit that he has made a HORRIFIC mistake in judgment that has cost thousands of families their happiness for the rest of their lives.

Over 25,000 American troops have been killed, or wounded, and over 100,000 innocent Iraqi and Afghani civilians have been killed.

What do you people study in school that causes your brains to be so horribly mis-programmed causing you to not be able to add one and one getting two?

I studied Advanced algebra, Trigonometry, Geometry, Calculus, Chemistry, Biology, 19 hours of psychology, Advanced Logic, and I made "A's" in all of them.

These are the course that teach students how to think clearly and in an unbiased manner. Apparently, they are not required course, and because most people are lazy and trifling they go through school taking Shop, general business, PE, and other mundane mess. Then when they graduate, if they graduate, you end up with a George Bush mentality.

If I am wrong here, please explain to me in a intelligent manner without name calling why what CBS news did is more important than our president and his regime lying to the American public on important matters dozens of times.

I want to hear someone's opinion besides dXAce. It's obvious to me that he received a massive lack of oxygen at birth, and is suffering from irreparable brain damage.

Are there any wise people on this forum besides me?

Peace

The dumbing down of Americans is definitely a real problem

Who deserves to be impeached and imprisoned the most?
A president receiving face from an adult willing female?

Or a president who lies to over 3,000,000,000 people worldwide and then orders the attack and destruction of hundreds of thousands of innocents, 1,200 American GI'S killed and over 25,000 injured?

Those of us who are not brain damaged, or racially biased the answer is obvious!
